New Search In Kidnaping Is Launched By Hoffman

Challenges Lindbergh on Cemetery Story in Reopening Case.

Schwarzkopf Told To Find the Others

Betty Gow and Curtis, of Norfolk, Brought to Fore Again.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 30.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman ordered the New Jersey State police today to reopen their investigation of the kidnaping and slaying of the Lindbergh baby.

The chief executive, who defied threats of impeachment two weeks ago after granting Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted murderer of of the child, a 30-day reprieve which saved him from execution the night of January 1, told Col. H. Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the State police, by letter that Hauptmann's fate is "almost the least important feature of this case."

"We can not accept any solution, that even by inference, is less than complete," he wrote, adding there is "abundant evidence that other persons participated in the crime."

Submits Own "Proof."

In support of his belief the Governor attached to the letter a long statement setting forth what he called "incontrovertible proof" that others were involved.

He pointed to Col. Charles A. Lindberg's own statements, made before the Bronx County grand jury and to Inspector Harry W. Walsh, of Jersey City, that he had seen another man, besides the "John" who collected the $50,000 ransom at St. Raymond's Cemetery, the Bronx, on the night of April 2, 1932, when the money was paid.

He dealt at length also with Dr. John F. Condon's statements and to his recent magazine articles in which the elderly educator said he heard the voice of a second man at the other end of the telephone the night of March 11, 1932, when he first made telephonic communication with the kidnaper.

Orders Weekly Report.

The law enforcement agencies have no reason to regard the case as closed, he wrote, and followed this with orders to Schwarzkopf that the State police report "at least once weekly" the progress of their investigation and that of coordinating agencies.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz said he will confer with Schwarzkopf at 10 a. m. tomorrow. The attorney general, who headed the prosecution at Hauptmann's Flemington trial a year ago, said he would make no comment until he had read the Governor's statement. In his opening statement to the jury at Flemington, in his summation and all through the trial he contended that Hauptmann alone was involved.

Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon County, where the trial was held, reiterated today his conviction that Hauptmann was the only one involved "so far as the proofs go."

Other Points Questioned.

Other points in the investigation, held important by the Governor and emphasized by him in his statement to Schwarzkopf were:

1—That Schwarzkopf himself at the time Violet Sharpe, maid in the Marrow home, committed suicide in June, 1932, released a statement saying "he felt her death went a long way toward indicating a solution of the crime."

2—That it "seems impossible to believe" the Lindbergh baby's thumbguard lay in the road of the Lindbergh estate for a month before it was found by Betty

10,000 Here Observe Birthday of President

Mrs. Roosevelt cuts the President's birthday cake at the Shoreham.

Gaiety Reigns Supreme in Six Hotels of the Capital as Throngs Dance to Aid Victims of Infantile Paralysis.

The Nation danced last night to help the crippled.

Here in Washington 10,000 men and women—Republicans as well as Democrats—joined in a whirl of jollity, led by a First Lady, who, in less than an hour and a half, visited the ballrooms of six hotels.

They were part of a multitude of 5,000,000 dancers throughout the United States who contributed more than $1,000,000 to help sufferers from infantile paralysis.

The reason for the Nation-wide party was the fifty-fourth birthday of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, but the motive was a desire to aid the 200,000, who, like himself, have suffered from the dread disease.

Innovation for Capital.

The City of Washington never witnessed anything quite like the merry-go-round of merriment of last night. Heretofore the President's Birthday Ball has been staged in one hotel, but because all who wanted to attend could not be accommodated it was decided this year to spread it out—making one $2.50 ticket good for all six hotels.

Mrs. Roosevelt, wearing a new satin dress and a necklace made of tiger's claws, journeyed from one hotel to another, taking in all six of them in the course of the night.

Ginger Rogers, beautiful cinema star, did likewise, trailed by hundreds of admirers. Guy Lombardo and his bandsmen also went "round and round."

All three—that is, Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Rogers and Guy Lombardo—came together at the Shoreham Hotel, and a record-breaking crowd turned out to see them.

Hears Two Songs.

Wherever she went, Mrs. Roosevelt inevitably heard two songs—"Happy Birthday to You" and "Happy Days Are Here Again."

She first visited the Raleigh Hotel. The celebrity from Hollywood, Ginger Rogers, already was there, together with her mother, Mrs. Lela Rogers. Mrs. Roosevelt greeted both of them heartily.

Mrs. Roosevelt was escorted by John Saul, chairman of the floor committee, and his assistants, H. B. Smith and Robert Cottrell. Three flourishes heralded Mrs. Roosevelt's entrance. She was preceded to the receiving line by two White House aids. The women in the receiving line were Mrs. Frederick Brooke, who wore a gown of gold net with green velvet trimming; Mrs. James Wadsworth, jr., in pale blue crepe; Mrs. John Slidell, Mrs. John W. Cutler, Miss Dorothy Bierer.

Welcomed at Willard.

Leaving the Raleigh, Mrs. Roosevelt hurried to the Willard Hotel. Guy Lombardo's Band was there ahead of her, and she did not attract as much attention as she had at the Raleigh. The two theme songs, however, were played in her honor.

She was received by Mrs. Charles Drayton, in a gown of dark-blue cut velvet; Mrs. Milton King, Miss Betsy Burk and Miss Dorothea Sowers.

The next stop for Mrs. Roosevelt was at the end of the block—the

Serfdom Ended For Germany, Hitler Warning

'Fighting and Sacrifice' Are Ahead, Is Message on Nazi Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler, standing bare-headed in a raw breeze to review his three years of rule, warned potential enemies today, "we are no longer defenseless helots, but self-confident world citizens."

"We can review the past proudly, but our goal is not yet reached," said Hitler, on the third anniversary of his chancellorship. "Fighting and sacrifice remain before us."

"We seek peace because we love it, but we insist on our honor because we do not live without it.

"Whoever believes he can deal with us as slaves will find we are the most obstinate people imaginable."

Storm Troops Hear Message.

Drawn up rigidly before the Reichstuehrer as he spoke from the steps of the old museum on the edge of the Lustgarten were 26,000 of his brown-clad Storm Troops, many of them now graying. His words carried clearly.

Sounding boards echoed his 25-minute review of Nazi accomplishments to other thousands on the Unter Den Linden, and radios carried it to listeners throughout the nation.

Referring to the rearmament program, which involved the breaking of the Versaille Treaty last spring, Hitler said: "Whoever opposes us now does it, not because we are Nazis, but because we restored military independence to Germany."

After his speech, Hitler remained while the throng was fed from field kitchens. Storm Troopers, here from throughout Germany, marched past the chancellery tonight in a torchlight parade, just as they did in the early morning of January 31, 1933.

Goal in 100 Years.

Der Fuehrer said the Nazi goal of unity and unanimity would be reached in 100 years.

Vigorously emphasizing his thesis that the Nazi movement was a long and difficult striving for national unity, with 17 years of struggle behind it and generations of hard work ahead of it, he declared "the best part of our people already

'Atrocious,' Art Patron Calls Chicago Home Town Painters

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—The cry of "Atrocious!" was raised again today by one of the Art Institute's leading patrons as the fortieth annual exhibition of home town painters opened to the public.

The first prize of $500 went to Constantine Pougialis for his somber canvas called "Russian Dancer"—a girl in lavender blouse, green skirt and red boots, who seemed to be sitting out the dance.

"A deformed female figure," was the judgment of Mrs. Frank G. Logan, who, with her husband, contributed the award. "I can't feel very happy about it."

It was Mrs. Logan, harsh critic of some of the works of the modern school, who precipitated the teacup furore over the pictures hung in the American show here last fall. She said she had received hundreds of letters supporting her protests.

"With few exceptions, the show is no better than the last one," Mrs. Logan asserted.

"I'll give anyone five cents if he can go in there and find a good picture," she said indicating one gallery of the exhibition.

Nobody accepted the challenge, but institute spokesmen pointed out the Pougialis canvas was among those earmarked for the Texas Centennial by Director Robert B. Harshe.

Professional critics found the display had been "soft-pedaled." Officials disclosed Harshe had instructed the jurors to pass up paintings they considered objectionable or obscene.

Fund Misuse Is Laid to Aid Of Talmadge

U. S. Claims WPA Cash Financed Literature Against Roosevelt.

Grand Jury Recesses Without TakingAction; 8 Witnesses Heard.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 30.—As Gov. Eugene Talmadge, apparently genuinely jubilant over the Macon meeting of Jeffersonian Democrats yesterday, expressed his determination to carry his fight against President Roosevelt to the country, the long arm of the Federal Government reached out today to crack down on the Talmadge political machine.

United States District Attorney Lawrence Camp laid before the Federal grand jury a complaint that A. S. Howell, a State supervisor of schools and brother of Chairman Hugh Howell of the Democratic State committee, had misused WPA funds.

Camp said he had affidavits from four relief roll workers asserting they had been assigned by the school supervisor to prepare for mailing copies of the Georgia Women's World, the newspaper distributed at the Macon meeting, which portrayed President and Mrs. Roosevelt as associating frequently with Negroes.

Eight Witnesses Testify.

The district attorney today called eight witnesses before the grand jury to testify regarding the charge against A. S. Howell. Camp would not reveal the nature of their testimony, but it was understood that the grand jury recessed today until February 12 without acting on the complaint.

"I regret very much that there is a political aspect to this matter," asserted Camp. "Politics has nothing whatever to do with this case. I am concerned only with the charge that Federal relief funds have been misused."

But the case was viewed here chiefly for its political significance. The evidence which the district attorney said he had accumulated links to the Talmadge organization the distribution of literature obviously designed to promote racial prejudices to the detriment of President Roosevelt.

Hopkins, Ickes Lead Attack.

Meanwhile, in Washington, WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins and Interior Secretary Ickes led the New Deal's attack on Talmadge in reply to his criticism of the Administration yesterday.

Hopkins declared that "some of Talmadge's political cheaters were caught chiseling" in alleged use of WPA workers "to mail out letters of Talmadge and Howell, State Democratic leader, in envelopes with Hugh Howell's name on them."

"I never did hold that outfit in very high esteem but I really didn't think they would do this."

Ickes repeated previous assertions that Talmadge's "word is not good," and made public a photostatic copy of a letter in which Talmadge promised to sponsor a bill that he later "vetoed." The Secretary said he had told Edward H. Foley, jr., chief PWA counsel, to look into the matter of legal proceedings.

Talmadge Answers.

The fact that the charge was laid before the grand jury the day after the Macon meeting was regarded as significant here. In some quarters it was contended the Roosevelt Democrats were beginning to fight back.

Asked about the use of the WPA workers for distribution of what Camp termed "scurrilous literature," Gov. Talmadge said:

"I know nothing about it and I am not responsible. But I don't want to be put in the position of throwing bricks at a newspaper that is friendly to me or at anyone whose heart is in the right place."

Camp explained that last August A. S. Howell, in his capacity as one of Georgia's school supervisors, applied for WPA workers to prepare an analysis of school records. The project was approved and ten women on the relief rolls were assigned to the task at $49 a month each.

The district attorney said that on complaint of Miss Gay B. Shepperson, State WPA administrator—who although originally recommended by Talmadge is now at odds with him—an investigation was made of the work done by these relief workers.

Accused Makes Denial.

He said he had affidavits from four of the ten workers stating that at various times in December they had been assigned by A. S. Howell to wrap, address and stamp copies of the Georgia Woman's World. The work was carried on in the State Military Building, Camp asserted. The mailing list for the newspaper, he said, was taken from that used for the Market Bulletin, a publication printed by the State agricultural department and sent to farmers.

One of the women Camp said swore that on some of the envelopes she addressed, the home of State Chairman Hugh Howell was given as a return address. The chairman declined to discuss the matter while his brother, the educational supervisor, asserted that "the charges are wholly untrue," but he would make no other explanation.

In quarters other than the district attorney's office it was reported that 450,000 copies of the edition of the Georgia Woman's World, distributed at Macon, had been printed. The newspaper for some months, it was asserted, has been carrying on a campaign against the President. The edition distributed at Macon was said to be a special

Tax to Pay Bonus, Farm Costs Is Discussed at White House; Glass Moves to Halt Inflation

Suggests 2¼ Billions Rider on Bill Already Passed in House.

Use of Gold Profit Is Patman's Plan

Texan Calls Committee to Map Currency Expansion Drive.

Swift action by the Senate Appropriations Committee on the President's request for $2,249,178,375 of bonus funds, may circumvent a drive of House expansionists to nail an inflationary rider to the bonus appropriation, it was indicated at the Capitol last night.

A move by the Senate to attach the new bonus estimates to either the independent offices or the deficiency appropriation bills was predicted last night by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Both appropriation measures are now before his committee, the Virginian pointed out, and both already have been passed by the House. The effect of such action virtually would be to block action by House inflationists seeking to make the bonus appropriation a means of placing new currency in circulation, but Glass declined to comment on that likelihood.

Inflation Plan Up Today.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, leader of the House expansionist forces, called his bonus steering committee to meet with him this morning to consider the possibility of an inflationary rider, to consider both the possibility of paying the bonus out of unused Treasury gold "profits" and by issuance of notes against free gold and silver in the Treasury.

At the same time, Patman moved to amend the "baby" bond bonus law to permit veterans receiving bonds in full payment of their adjusted service certificates to collect 3 per cent interest on them the first year. Under the law as passed, interest would accrue only to veterans who held their bonds a full year or more.

At the time the bonus passed the House, Patman indicated he would make his fight for inflation when the issue of appropriating the money to pay the veterans was presented to the House.

Senate Hurdle Difficult.

But if the Senate acts first, via the deficiency or independent offices bill, it would be difficult for the House expansionist group to raise the question. Both bills would come back to the House for concurrence in or rejection of Senate amendments. If the Senate bonus appropriation is rejected, the whole question would be thrown into conference.

There was no indication, however, that Senate leaders in acting first on the President's bonus estimates had in mind any move to forestall the House expansionist maneuver, which they do not regard as a serious threat.

Twice, while the bonus was under consideration in the Senate, inflation amendments were emphatically rejected, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, who led the Senate drive to pay the bonus in inflated currency, indicated yesterday he would make no further efforts where the bonus was concerned.

House leaders pointed out that even if the new bonus appropriation should be considered first in the House, it would probably be subject to a point of order as "legislation" on an appropriation bill.

Patman Claims Vote Margin.

At today's House bonus steering conference, means of getting around the question of germaneness, and even a petition to force a vote on the new currency proposal, will be considered. Patman insists they "have enough votes to put our proposal through both Houses of Congress."

Prior to yesterday's White House conference, at which taxes to pay the bonus were considered incidentally, Secretary of the Treasury

Train Is Derailed; Many Are Injured

Sunbury, Pa., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Many persons were reported injured late tonight when the Williamsporter, crack passenger train of the Reading Railroad, left the rails at the village of Shamokin Dam.

The train jumped the tracks at a switch on a curve at the approach to the Susquehanna River and hurtled down an embankment.

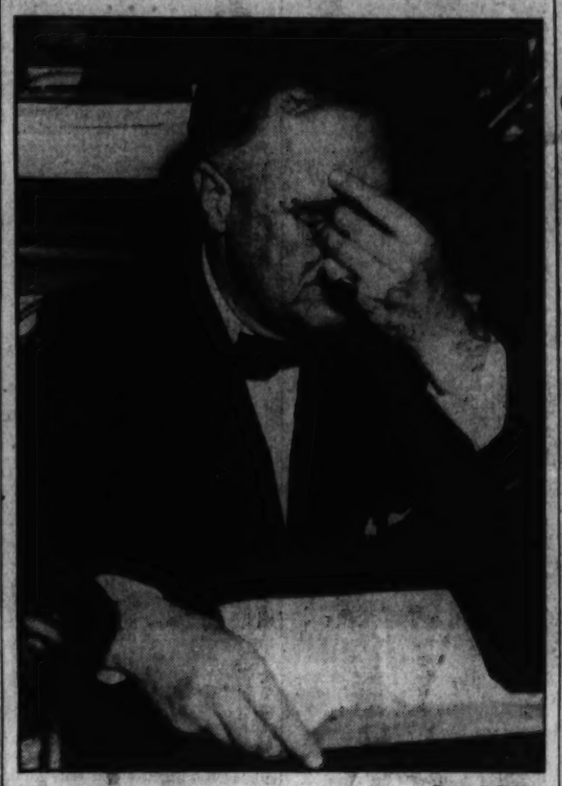
The entire train, including five passenger coaches, went down the embankment.

Twenty persons were hurried to the Mary H. Packer Hospital, all seriously injured, and rescuers began to search the wreckage for bodies.

Fire trucks, ambulances and private cars were pressed into service immediately to carry the injured to the hospital.

Relief workers said it would be impossible to determine number of fatalities before morning despite the fact that a large number of persons, roused from their beds by the noise of the crash, set to work to carry the injured and the dying out of the shattered coaches.

The President Ponders Farm Problem



Harris & Ewing.

President Roosevelt caught in a meditative pose yesterday a few minutes after he had conferred on the new agricultural program.

Process Impost, Income Levy Rise Among Possibilities.

Cummings, Wallace, Bell at Conference

President May Call On Congress to Choose Own Method.

By Robert C. Albright.

A new text program, to finance not merely the heavy cost of the Administration's new farm program, but to defray at least part of the bonus drain, appeared definitely in the making yesterday as the President and close fiscal advisers buckled down to a task his election-wary Congress is hesitant to assume.

High officials were summoned to the White House in significant coincidence with Senate receipt of a report from its Agriculture Committee. The report indorsed broad new discretionary powers for the Secretary of Agriculture asked by the Administration, but urged inflationary raising of prices by methods frowned on by the President.

Report Asks No Taxes.

No taxes were asked in the report, which was filed by Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, joint author of the plan through which the Administration hopes to salvage most of the invalidated machinery of AAA.

In informed official quarters, however, it was indicated the President may send a message to Congress on taxes, and they may not be limited to the farm program, which alone involves costs, past and future, of nearly $1,000,000,000. An effort may be made to raise between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000 to defray part of this farm aid program, it was said.

Yesterday's White House conference adjourned without any official disclosure of what it accomplished, but the whole tax field was said to have been skimmed, with some discussion of bonus taxation.

Four Possible Sources.

It was learned that the Treasury has made groundwork studies covering four sources of possible new revenue, but what use might be made of all or any of these could not be ascertained. They cover processing taxes, somewhat like the old AAA variety recently invalidated by the Supreme Court; an increase in normal income tax rates; higher taxes on income from $10,000 to $100,000 a year, and a general manufacturers excise tax.

It was said to be likely that the President's message, if a new tax program is decided on, and Mr. Roosevelt decides to message it to Congress, may outline a number of tax alternatives and suggest Congress choose between them.

A tax program in an election year is never welcome to Congress, and most members eyed with uneasiness the spreading revenue rumors.

Program Ready in Week.

Before he was summoned to the White House, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings had informed reporters that a tax program to provide for the new farm plan will be ready within a week.

In addition to the $440,000,000 to be asked for the first year's operation of the farm program, the President and his advisors considered ways of meeting the estimated $296,000,000 in back payments to farmers who had partially complied with 1935 farm contracts, and recouping $180,000,000 in revenues lost when the Supreme Court ordered that amount of impounded processing taxes returned to millers.

Whether the cost of the bonus also will be incorporated in the new revenue plan was a matter of speculation, as was a suggestion that the Administration resort to excess profits taxes to get back the $180,000,000 they lost by the high court ruling.

Besides Attorney General Cummings, sitting in on yesterday's White House tax conference were Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary Wallace and Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Ball.

As Administration forces at the Capitol massed for a movement to force through the Senate next week the new Wallace farm plan, a significant minority plan for solving the farm problem was filed with the Mine Workers Defy A. F. L.; May Secede in Union Dispute

1,700 Delegates at Parley Here Determine to Oppose Craft Proposal and Battle to Unite All Labor in Single Organization.

Shouting tumultuous applause, 1,700 delegates to the United Mine Workers of America convention yesterday unanimously voted a motion which may result in the union's eventual secession from the American Federation of Labor.

"The American Federation of Labor has made a dastardly, diabolical betrayal of everything for which the true labor movement stands," bellowed President John L. Lewis in an address immediately preceding the vote on the motion.

"If you are willing to assume the responsibility of fighting at all costs for industrial unionization—if you are willing, I am, too," he said. The delegates stood on their seats and cheered, then passed the motion unanimously.

The motion came in the form of an additional paragraph supplementing a committee report on the matter of industrial organization. The A. F. of L. has refused to seek industrial unionization while the United Mine Workers of America, most powerful single union in the country, with a membership of one-fifth of the 3,000,000 members of the A. F. of L., has fought consistently for unionization of mass production industries in an effort to organize the non-unionized 39,000,000 workers in the Nation.

The paragraph said:

"The committee further recommends that I. at any time in the judgment of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers the conditions and circumstances warrant, that they are hereby authorized to withhold the payment of further taxes to the American Federation of Labor."

These taxes amount to $48,000 annually.

Officials said the vote's significance was not in the amount of money involved, but in the known determination of President Lewis to continue fighting for industrial unionization of the country.

Speaking of the A. F. of L.'s insistence that Lewis disband the committee for industrial organization, an organization of eight chiefs of industrial unions working for that movement, Lewis said:

"If the executive council of the American Federation of Labor,

Senators Vote Cash to Finish Arms Inquiry

Nye's Committee Is Given $7,369 Without a Dissenting Voice.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate late yesterday agreed, without a dissenting vote, to an additional appropriation of $7,369 to enable the Munitions Committee, headed by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, to complete its investigation into the munitions industry.

As a result of the new appropriation, the committee is expected to recall J. P. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont and George Whitney, partners of J. P. Morgan & Co., to the witness stand early next week to continue relation of their activities prior to entry of the United States into the World War.

The additional appropriation was voted on the promise of committee members that the investigation would not last more than ten days and that a final report would be made late in February or early in March.

The new money included payment of a deficit of $2,764 already incurred by the committee. Previous appropriations have totaled $125,000, in addition to $58,000 of relief funds used in employment of investigators in New York.

A resolution calling for the appropriation was reported early in

Capital Again Visited by Snow As Mantle Covers Dixie States

Snow again added to the hazards of Washington motorists last night. Weather Bureau officials, however, did not expect the fall to be heavy.

After a day of comparatively pleasant weather, the temperature began dropping early last night and was expected to reach 10 degrees above zero before daylight.

The lowest mark yesterday was 21 at 7 a. m., while the maximum was 28 at 3 p. m.

Today is due to be fair and colder, with little change in prospect for tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the South shivered as the mercury went into a nose dive in several States. Eleven inches of snow were reported in Birmingham, Ala., while eight inches crippled Atlanta traffic.

An acute coal shortage was threatened in Alabama, and coal operators sought a six-day truce with the United Mine Workers of America to ship coal for smaller Alabama towns and Mississippi cities.

By noon the temperature stood at 29 in the Georgia metropolis. Snow plows were used for the first time in Atlanta's history. Sixteen trolley cars were derailed and one locomotive jumped the track in the yards. The Associated Press reported slippery Georgia highways caused one death, as rain fell below the snow belt.

In the usually balmy Carolinas snow was 5 to inches deep, and more was forecast before dawn. Tidewater Virginia and the western part of the State were covered with snow.

Warburg Holds New Deal Bank Program Fails

Financier, in N. Y. Forum, Calls for Committee to Draft Reform.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—James P. Warburg, financier, said tonight that the Roosevelt Administration had "not ever begun" an attack on the problems of currency and banking reform, and proposed a commission to study these problems.

He spoke at a "town meeting" forum, which was broadcast.

He said "the New Dealers" believed in economic reform by the procedure of "an impatient and temperamental Executive rushing through an acquiescent Congress ill-considered measures conceived in a spirit of punitive righteousness."

The financier said a commission "of the best men available" should be appointed to plan a slow conversion to an improved banking and monetary plan. The "hodge-podge" of conflicting and overlapping State-Federal control of banks and the relation of various currency forms and metal money, he said, were items needing attention.

David Cushman Coyle, Washington economist, who spoke after Warburg, said people disliked "this absurd money system" which caused bankers to release funds in a boom and "leave us flat" when times are hard.

"It (the system) was supposed to be based on gold," he said, "but it was actually based on confidence. Confidence is a technical word meaning that the people have already forgotten what happened to them last time and do not yet realize what is going to happen to them next time."

He proposed Federal taxation to build boom-time surpluses in preparation for depression needs.

6 Federal Reserve Members Approved

The Senate yesterday confirmed without opposition President Roosevelt's reorganized Federal Reserve Board, including Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, who is slated for the new chairmanship February 1.

The action was taken by unanimous consent, as the rules provided the House appointments go over a day after they are formally reported. Eccles was named for a four-year term.

The five other appointments approved, with a seventh to come later, were:

M. S. Szymczak, of Chicago, 12-year term; Joseph A. Broderick, of New York, 14 years; Ronald Ransom, of Georgia, 6 years; John [illegible], of Ohio, 10 years, and Ralph W. Morrison, of Texas, 2 years.

Malayan Riot Kills 8.

Singapore, Jan. 30 (AP).—Eight persons were killed and 31 wounded today in a riot at an iron mine in the State of Trengganu, in the northeast Malay Peninsula. The casualties were suffered by coolies during several hours of fighting started by a quarrel over gambling.

Bonus Bill

Morgenthau again said orthodox methods of procedure will be followed in paying the bonus.

While not directly implying new taxes, he pointed out that three steps are being taken—first, a request for a bonus appropriation; second, Congressional approval of the appropriation; and third, a step he declined to mention, but which some reporters interpreted to mean new taxes. Morgenthau said he was willing to talk taxes with Congress "on invitation."

An alternative method of meeting revenue demands was pushed in the House by Representative Edward A. Kenney (Democrat), New Jersey, veteran campaigner for a "national lottery." Contending "no one wants new taxes," and that his lottery bill would make them unnecessary, Kenney said he would circulate a petition to force a vote on his measure.

On receipt of the President's letter requesting a bonus appropriation, Speaker Byrns turned it over to the House Appropriations Committee, which also received detailed estimates from Charles H. Fullaway, administrative assistant to the budget director.

The President, in his letter to Byrns, said:

"I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of the Congress, for the purpose of carrying out the adjusted compensation payment act, 1936, supplemental estimates of appropriations for the Veterans' Administration, fiscal years 1936 and 1937, $2,242,500,000, and for the Treasury Department, fiscal years 1936 and 1937, $6,678,375, amounting in all to $2,249,178,375."

In his detailed statement, Fullaway explained that in addition to the $6,678,375 needed by the Treasury to administer the law, $5,500,000 would be needed by the Veteran's Administration and co-ordinated agencies.

"The supplemental estimate of $2,237,000,000 for the adjusted service certificate appropriated fund," Fullaway said, "is intended to meet all requirements of the fund, and render unnecessary any appropriation for the fiscal year 1937 under the estimate of $160,000,000 for the purpose contained in the budget for the fiscal year 1937."

Gov. Talmadge's Presidential Campaign Uncertain; to Stump Country Against Roosevelt.

By Franklyn Waltman

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 30.—Although Georgia's red-suspendered Governor, Eugene Talmadge, has been indorsed as a Presidential candidate and has a platform, his future course and his effectiveness in this campaign remain matters of speculation, even among those who know him best.

The Governor reveals little about his plans beyond asserting he will campaign all over the country against the President. He revealed speaking engagements at Baltimore, February 8; at Springfield, Ill., with Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, February 11; at Madisonville, Ky.—under auspices of former Gov. Ruby Laffoon—February 12, and at Peoria, Ill., February 22. He said he plans a speaking tour to the Pacific Coast this spring.

Perhaps Gov. Talmadge does not know what his future course will be. A friend here quotes him as saying "I'm going to outsmart these fellows who are trying to guess what I'm going to do, because I don't know myself." Consequently it is not known whether he will enter his name as a Presidential candidate, even in his home State, nor is it known whether he will bolt the Democratic Party if President Roosevelt is renominated.

The consensus here is that the Governor cannot take away from President Roosevelt the delegation of a single Southern State—not even Georgia. If that is so, then Talmadge will be outside of the Philadelphia convention. But the feeling exists here that he will support the Republican nominee, rather than vote for President Roosevelt's re-election.

In any analysis of the situation of the Democratic Party in the Southern States, the first thing that is clear is that the primary system is wholly within the hands of the Democratic leaders—and these leaders, with the exception of Georgia and Louisiana, are held to be loyal to the President.

Thus, aside from these exceptions, Talmadge stands little chance of party support in the Southern States. It is barely possible Louisiana might support Talmadge at the convention—but since the death of Gov. Oscar K. Allen, prospects for a reconciliation between the Louisiana organization and the New Deal have greatly improved.

As for Georgia, political observers who at the end of November told this writer that a race between Talmadge and Roosevelt, in a preferential primary based on the existing proportional vote system, would be close, now assert that Roosevelt would win. A remark by the Governor said to have reflected on the President's physical infirmities, increased activity by Roosevelt leaders, and resentment over invalidation of AAA are described as reasons for the change in sentiment.

There is a possibility the Governor will not take a chance on a preferential primary, but will have the Democratic State committee, which he dominates, name a delegation, instructed or uninstructed, but friendly to him. The State committee has the power to do this. Indorsement of the Governor by the Macon meeting was designed as a springboard for such action by the committee, some believe.

If Talmadge follows such a course, his effort will be doomed before it is launched, because the Roosevelt managers in the State propose to meet it by sending a rival delegation, selected by county mass meetings, to Philadelphia, and none need have any doubt which group would be seated. Of course, the Governor could yell "Persecution" and accuse the President of using a steam-roller.

• • • •

Although they profess to feel no uneasiness about Talmadge's prospects here, the Georgia Roosevelt leaders are making unusual efforts to combat him. A State campaign manager, Marion Allen, has already been selected, and tomorrow will go to Washington to formulate campaign plans with the Georgia congressional delegation. The Federal grand jury inquiry into the use of PWA funds for the distribution of the newspaper spreading race prejudice, launched the day after the Macon meeting, and connecting that propaganda directly with the Talmadge organization, is further evidence that the Roosevelt leaders do not feel as optimistic as they profess.

• • • •

Talmadge, however, appears to be a greater threat to Roosevelt in November than in the primary. His friends assert he "never forgives and never forgets," while his foes assert he is really angling to be Secretary of Agriculture if a Republican is elected in November.

None believe he could carry Georgia into the Republican column, for this State is one of two Southern States that has never gone Republican since the Civil War. But, it is argued, he might be helpful in carrying Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and perhaps Texas for the Republican nominee.

At all events, his co-worker, John H. Kirby, of Texas, intimated last night that, if Roosevelt were renominated, his Southern committee for upholding the Constitution would continue its opposition, perhaps setting up a third party to make it easy for bolting Democrats, who have conscientious scruples against voting for a Republican. He significantly recited what happened when William Jennings Bryan was nominated in 1896.

• • •

In this connection significance was attached to Talmadge's friendly reference to Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas in his speech at Macon yesterday. It was taken to mean that Landon was the kind of Republican for whom Southern Democrats could vote. Incidentally, there is considerable talk regarding the Landon candidacy here, although disappointment was expressed by some over the colorless character of his Topeka speech.

WPA to Renovate Republicans' Hall

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins said yesterday he would allot $115,000 of WPA funds to renovate the Cleveland public auditorium where the Republican national convention is to be held in June.

About $100,000 for improving the Philadelphia convention hall, where the Democratic convention is to be held was included in a $1,900,000 allotment to the Quaker City, approved Wednesday.

Hopkins laughed when he was reminded that the Socialist Party would use the Cleveland auditorium for its convention in advance of the Republican gathering.

Youth Given 2 Years On 4 Larceny Charges

Alexander Bundy, colored, 19, was sentenced to two years in jail on four charges of petit larceny when arraigned before Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt yesterday.

The youth was charged with stealing clothing and a desk set from the office of an evening paper and a camera from another. Detective Sergts. Michael Dowd, Hugh Brodie and Leo Murray testified Bundy led them to second-hand stores where more than $1,000 worth of stolen property was recovered.

Federal Reserve Lets Building Bid

The George A. Fuller Co., of New York and Washington, yesterday was awarded a contract for constructing the new home of the Federal Reserve Board, at Constitution avenue and Twentieth street northwest. The firm's $3,484,000 bid was the lowest of nine submitted.

With an exterior of Georgia marble, in conformity with adjacent buildings and the Lincoln Memorial just across the avenue, the structure will have four stories and contain 92,000 square feet of floor space. The contractor will have 16 months in which to complete his work.

Paul Cret, of Philadelphia, architect of the Pan-American and other memorial buildings in Washington, designed the new Federal Reserve structure. At present the board of reserve governors occupies leased space in the Washington Building.

Dr. Adolph C. Miller, retiring member, will continue to represent the board in dealings with the builders.

The George A. Fuller Co. is general contractor for the new Interior Building, now under construction. Other structures it has erected here in recent years include the Lincoln Memorial, Supreme Court, Justice, Archives and Pharmaceutical buildings.

Observers See Landon Taking Middle of Road

Eastern Leaders May Aid Contest With Borah; Speech Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Gov. Landon of Kansas was generally believed in the Sapital last night to be embarking on a middle-of-the-road course in quest of the Republican Presidential nomination.

Praise of his position on national affairs by Eastern organizatoin leaders in the party afforded a significant aftermath to his Topeka speech.

In contrast to their hostility toward Senator Borah, of Idaho, one after another spoke highly of the Kansan. Greater organization on his behalf, possibly to the extent of contesting with Borah for delegates in pivotal States, was expected to be encouraged.

Troubled by factionalism themselves, Democrats professed no worry. "All canned stuff," was the way Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, dismissed the Landon case against the Administration.

"He is trying to be conservative," commented Representative O'Connor, of New York. "He started out as a liberal from the wheat fields and it looks now as if he is making a play for Wall street."

Meanwhile a resolution proposing a five-member Senate committee to investigate campaign expenses and activities was introduced yesterday by Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, and referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

Vice President Garner would name the committee, which would "investigate the campaign expenditures of the various Presidential candidates, Vice Presidential candidates and candidates for the United States Senate in both parties."

The committee also would inquire into methods of expenditure and the "use of any other means of influence, including the promise or use of patronage."

The inquiry would start before State primaries and conventions.

Murder Suspect Shot By Government Agents

Hoboken, N. J., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—A man police described as Charles Yanowski, 35, alias "Charlie, the Jew," was shot and badly wounded by Department of Justice agents tonight in front of an apartment house here.

Police said Yanowski was wanted for questioning in connection with the murder of John Gaynor, of New York, and the robbery of a bank in Fort Lee last December. Yanowski was taken to St. Mary's Hospital and operated on immediately in an effort to save his life.

U. S. Delegation Wins Two Tilts At Navy Parley

Approval Seen for American Plan to Extend Life of Battleships.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 30.—The American delegation today won two important skirmishes in the four-power naval conference.

The further American suggestion for the extension of the official life of battleships from 20 to 26 years appeared to have a good chance of approval.

The Washington delegation, in a technical sub-committee meeting, frustrated a French attempt to have Geneva specified in any agreement as the meeting place for any future consultation of powers, asserting the United States does not want to be involved in any agreement with the League of Nations.

Efforts of other powers to have exact number of planes aboard aircraft carriers disclosed also was prevented by the Americans.

The United States keeps secret the number of planes aboard its carriers, and succeeded in getting the sub-committee to agree that the powers would exchange information only on the "approximate number."

Naval experts said approval of the American suggestion adding six years to the life of battleships would mean a large saving for taxpayers, unless the saving on replacement construction is spent on other types of vessels or if a construction race is started.

At the end of 1936, when the Washington and London treaty prohibitions on battleship construction expire, the United States will have seven of a total of 15 battleships at least 20 years of age; Great Britain 11 of 15, and Japan 4 of 9.

Six years added to the official age would put off any replacement until 1942. If the suggestion of Norman H. Davis, head of the American delegation, is not approved it would mean the powers could begin wholesale replacement building in 1937.

Although Japan has withdrawn from the conference, some delegates feel she is likely to abide voluntarily by any conference agreement, in order to prevent a building race.

Any agreement will contain a clause giving conference powers—Britain, the United States, France and Italy—freedom of action in case Japan starts replacing ships before or during the life of the official extension period.

Experts estimate new battleships in 1937 would cost nearly $40,000,000 apiece.

4-Way Tax Plans Studied

House by Representative Clifford Hope, of Kansas, ranking Republican member of the House Agriculture Committee.

Representative Hope's bill would pay the producers of surplus agricultural commodities, such as wheat, cotton, hogs and tobacco, an equivalent for the tariff protection they are unable to receive because these commodities are not on an export basis. He said his plan would cost probably $400,000,000 a year, to be defrayed by tariff revenues.

Incorporated in Senator Bankhead's report to the Senate on the Administration's new farm plan was a recommendation written into the report on last-minute insistence of Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

It stated that the farm problem was "very largely a monetary one," and suggested the President employ one or more of several powers the executive now possesses to inflate the currency by issuing new money or by further devaluation of the dollar.

Seed Loan Bill First.

Bankhead hoped to call the measure up in the Senate Monday, but Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday made the $60,000,000 farm seed loan bill the Senate's unfinished business.

Asserting his belief that the new farm plan is constitutional, in the face of doubts in the minds of most committee members, Senator Bankhead, in his majority report, yesterday declared the bill was prepared "so as not to conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court" in the AAA case.

Bankhead quoted from a statement in the Supreme Court's minority opinion, as follows:

"If appropriation in aid of a program of curtailment of agricultural production is constitutional, and it is ont denied that it is, payment to farmers on condition that they reduce their crop acreage is constitutional."

Bankhead insisted the stated purpose of the new farm bill is "entirely different from that contained in the AAA act."

"No contracts to comply with Federal regulations or contracts of any sort are provided for," his report said. "The conservation of natural resources, the fertility of agricultural lands and soil building are the declared purposes of the pending bill. No tax is levied by the bill."

He said the measure was designed to conform with principles the court "either expressly sanctioned, or expressly refrained from condemning, in passing upon the AAA."

Taken Over by States.

Pointing out that under the act States will take over the program in 1938, with Federal funds made available only through grants to the States, he said this provision "projects the ultimate plan whereby the objectives of the act are to be carried out." Specific legislation for this purpose will be offered later, he said.

In offering a minority alternative for the Administration farm plan, Representative Hope said yesterday he made no claim that it is a solution to the entire farm problem, or necessarily perfect in form.

Like George N. Peek, the President's former adviser on foreign trade, Hope believes that foreign markets offer the broad solution to the farm problem, that reciprocal tariff agreements should be repealed, and American farm products should push into foreign fields on a bilateral trade basis.

The bill he offered yesterday would use the tariff itself to correct the "disadvantages" created by it for such farm commodities as are on an export basis.

A Tariff Equivalent.

Briefly, his measure proposed that the producer of surplus commodities should be given a tariff equivalent payment on that part of his production domestically consumed, which is equal to the tariff costs which he bears.

It would require, first, that the Tariff Commission ascertain the approximate amount the tariff adds to the price of those articles which the farmer most commonly buys.

"Thus," he explained, "if it were found that on an average, the tariff adds 25 per cent to the cost of the articles which the farmer buys, a tariff equivalent payment would be given to the producer of export commodities amounting to 25 per cent of that portion of his sales which went into domestic consumption."

Hastings Calls Raskob, duPont Politics Victims

Senator Says Tax Charges Were Made in Revenge on New Deal Foes.

Intimating that the Government's income tax claims against Pierre du Pont and John J. Raskob, former Democratic National chairman, grew out of their activity in the American Liberty League, Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, came to their defense in the Senate yesterday.

Hastings particularly referred to an attack made upon du Pont by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington State, in which the Senator referred to the Delaware manufacturer and Liberty League backer as a "rascal."

In the course of his speech, Hastings revealed that in 1929 du Pont paid an income tax of $4,563,683 and contributed to charity a total of $982,473. He also stated that the total personal income tax paid in the United States that year was only 183 times that paid by duPont.

Calls Charges Vicious.

Referring to Schwellenbach's charges as "vicious," Hastings declared that "if the Senator from Washington had made that speech anywhere in Delaware before a gathering of either its wealthiest citizens or its poorest citizens it would have met with unanimous condemnation."

Hastings asserted that Pierre du Pont had supported both Alfred E. Smith and President Roosevelt for the Presidency, and said that he believed du Pont's friendship for Raskob had prompted him to do this.

The Delaware Senator charged that Schwellenbach had undertaken "to convict without knowing the facts."

"On March 15, 1930," Hastings said, "Mr. du Pont filed his 1929 income tax return and paid on the dates required by the statute a total of $4,443,702.17 to the Federal Government."

Du Pont Agent Blamed.

He said that when an examination was made of the records it was discovered that an agent of du Pont had, without du Pont's knowledge, purchased some of the stocks du Pont had sold. He said the Government as a result had discovered a deficiency of $120,286.70, which du Pont had promptly paid. He said du Pont had claimed deductions of $774,332.44 as contributions to charity, but that the Government had found the deduction should have been $982,473.85.

Subsequently, however, Hastings said, the Government changed the basis of computation and held that an additional deficiency of $164,477.31 existed. He said it was subsequently agreed that this payment should be held in abeyance pending a Supreme Court decision on deductions for charity. He said this case was decided against the Government, but that meanwhile the Liberty League had become active.

"Mr. du Pont," he said, "was requested to appear before the Internal Revenue Bureau, and when he appeared he was asked some questions with respect to these transactions between himself and Mr. Raskob. He was asked the important question of whether or not they were bona fide transactions. He assured the bureau they were bona fide.

"Here was the implication of a charge of fraud. Here was the intimation of terrorism in Government. It is impossible for reasonable persons to believe that there is not a direct relation between the intimation made by the department to Mr. du Pont and the relation of Mr. du Pont and Mr. Raskob to an organization opposing New Deal policies."

Hastings said that the counsel for the Internal Revenue Commissioner, and not du Pont, had asked for continuance of hearings of the tax case.

"It was not until an answer was filed on January 6, 1936, that the Government ever set up any claim of fraud in these transactions between Mr. Raskob and Mr. du Pont," Hastings said.

"This man who paid more than $4,500,000 to the Government as an income tax in 1929; this man who contributed to charity for that same year, but slightly less than $1,000,000, or a total of $5,500,000 to his Government and to charity is now held up by the junior Senator from Washington as being guilty of 'as high a degree of criminology as has ever been perpetrated by racketeers who were finally put in the penitentiary.'

"He refers to Mr. du Pont and his friends as 'leeches,' 'blood suckers,' as 'rascals' and 'crooks, and it seems to me that it is not too much to say that that speech will ever remain a blot upon the Senator's record and upon the record of this great body itself."

At the close of Hastings' talk Schwellenbach gained the floor and demanded to know whether the Senator from Delaware approved the stock transactions between du Pont and Raskob. Hastings said he did not, but that he condemned any attempt to try the case in the Senate.

Schwellenbach said he had not made his statements without a study of the record and repeated that he believed "two men who would defraud the Government are rascals and crooks."

THEODORE PAPPAS, JR.

Biggest Baby on Record Here Scales 13 Lbs.; Is Couple's 12th

Theodore Pappas, Jr., Born at Homeopathic Hospital; Middle-Aged Greek Parents Proud of Latest Addition to Large Family.

He already has been christened Theodore Pappas, jr., and he has the distinction of being the largest baby ever born in Homeopathic Hospital, and, as far as anyone can remember, the largest ever born in the District.

When the stork winged earthward to Washington with Theodore a few days ago, he flew unusually low, almost knocking off a couple of chimney pots, for Theodore weighed, at the time of his birth, 13 pounds and 4 ounces.

Theodore's mother is Mrs. Dena Pappas. Papa Pappas is named Theodore, too, and he works at the City Market.

Young Theodore is the twelfth child of Mr. and Mrs. Pappas, who, themselves, were born in Greece. Mrs. Pappas is 46 and doing well, physicians say. Both Mama and Papa Pappas are tremendously proud of their tremendous youngster, the child of their middle age.

"You're a popular young man today, Theodore," Head Nurse Rose Moffitt kept telling the gigantic youngster yesterday, as flash bulbs blazed.

"You're a popular young man today, Theodore," echoed many of the patients, already proud of the whopping youngster.

In his crib, young Theodore endured the approach of strangers good-naturedly. Life was a bowl of cherries to Theodore, a bowl of cherries as ruddy as his cheeks.

They put him on the scales, and the scales sagged, and still he laughed.

"Laughter," observed Miss Moffitt, "seems to be about the only comment huge, young Theodore Pappas will make."

Virginia Boy, 16, Jailed as Killer Of Farm Couple

Farmer and Wife Beaten to Death; Official Hints at Mob Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Dillwyn, Va., Jan. 30.—Buckingham County authorities held Hazel Rose, 16-year-old Negro boy, on a murder charge tonight after an elderly Buckingham County farmer and his wife had been beaten to death.

Rose was arrested by Sheriff John Snoddy, of Buckingham County, and charged with the slaying of the couple, Edward C. Kellenger, 68, and his wife.

Commonwealth's Attorney Claude R. Wood tonight said he would demand the death penalty for Rose.

"If they don't give him death, they ought to burn the electric chair up," the prosecutor declared.

He said there was "high feeling" against the youth. The prosecutor said he intended to confer with Sheriff Snoddy as to whether a special guard should be established at the jail.

Rose had only 12 cents in his pocket when arrested 15 miles from the Kellenger home, in Cumberland County.

Husband Killed in Yard.

The assailant fatally injured Mrs. Kellenger in the farmhouse and then killed her husband in a struggle in the yard, while a third occupant of the home, Miss Carrie Davis, leaned from an upstairs window and pleaded with the Negro.

The farmer was killed from numerous blows, some of which were struck with an automobile pump. Mrs. Kellenger died at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from a crushed skull.

Miss Davis, a sister of the farmer's wife, said she had to flee for her life when the young Negro refused her offer of $5 to go away. J. C. Dunkun, Lulu Patterson and other residents of Dillwyn said Miss Davis identified the Negro as Rose, who lived a quarter of a mile away and had worked for Kellenger.

The double killing occured near Hubbards Bridge in the Cordsville district of Buckingham County, in the heart of southside Virginia.

Boy Demanded Money.

Dunkun said the Negro came to the farmhouse between 7 and 8 o'clock this morning and demanded money.

Whether this was refused him was not clear, pending an official account of the case, but he forced his way through the door and hurled a jar of preserves at the farm woman.

Miss Davis said she heard her sister's screams and a few moments afterward the sound of struggle in the yard. Looking from the window, she saw her brother-in-law and the Negro fighting.

The younger man killed the elderly farmer with numerous blows, some of which were struck with an automobile pump, Dunkun said.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Miss Harriet Virginia Galt, 2303 Bancroft place northwest, Washington, D. C., is bequeathed the real and personal property and residual estate of her brother, Sterling Galt, jr., in his will filed today for probate.

Galt died January 10. The estate was valued formally at "more than $10,000."

Astor and Wife Sail For Holiday in Europe

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—John Jacob Astor 3d, one of the world's richest young men, and his wife, the former Ellen Tuck French, sailed on the Ile de France today for what he described as "nothing but a holiday."

They left their 6-month-old son, William, at home in New York.

Astor, who recently quit a shipping clerk's job with the International Mercantile Marine, said they would be gone from six weeks to two months, stopping in Paris, St. Moritz and Cannes.

MRS. EMILY FINE.

Woman Picket, Carrying Sign, To Face Court

Amlie's $25 Check Fails to Halt Action Against Former Educator.

A Congressional check and higher education were of little use yesterday to Mrs. Emily Newhall Brown Fine, a former instructor at Smith and Radcliffe colleges for women, when she was brought into police headquarters on a charge of violating the sign law in front of Constitution Hall, where the United Mine Workers of America are holding a convention.

Mrs. Fine was pacing up and down in front of the hall wearing a "sandwich" sign. She also was selling, or offering for sale, copies of a magazine.

Police Wanted the Sign.

Plainclothes policemen said they wanted the sign. Mrs. Fine said she wanted to keep it, though she didn't mind taking it off.

Apparently, removal of the sign failed to satisfy police. In any event, Mrs. Fine soon appeared at headquarters where she was joined by Representative Thomas R. Amlie, of Wisconsin. Amlie offered a $25 check for Mrs. Fine's collateral. The police said they had no doubt the check was good, but accepting it would be against the rules. So Amlie dug up the cash.

Mrs. Fine is the wife of John M. Fine, office manager for the Third Party Movement. Representative Amlie is national party chairman.

Article by Olson.

One of the articles in the magazine was "Why a New National Party?" by Gov. Floyd Olson, of Minnesota. Another was an interview with John L. Lewis, president of the convening mine workers, entitled, "Labor Leader No. 1," and advertised in the sign police didn't want Mrs. Fine to carry.

The magazine is edited by Alfred M. Bingham, son of former United States Senator Hiram Bingham.

Mrs. Fine will be arraigned in Police Court at 9 a. m. today.

Snell Demands Band Walkout Blame Be Fixed

Threatens to Delay Navy Supply Bill; Civilian Musicians Protest.

The political tempest which swept the Capital Wednesday over the Marine Band on more than 500 delegates to the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense still rumbled yesterday as Republicans announced they were determined to find out who ordered the band to leave the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday night without playing a single note.

Republican Leader Bertrand Snell, who led the attack on the House floor Wednesday, said he intended to find out who was responsible for the incident, "if we have to fight the Navy's appropriation to do it."

As only a few of the women, representative of 40 patriotic organizations throughout the Nation, remained in Washington yesterday, the American Federation of Musicians entered the squabble.

In a letter to Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, A. C. Hayden, executive officer of the organized musicians, asked for an explanation of the action of the Marine Band in going there in the first place.

"Vociferous partisans pretend to be blind to the real questions," stated Hayden.

"Why did the department in this instance, as it habitually does, flagrantly violate the statute law forbidding any use of a service band that deprives civilian musicians of employment?" demanded Hayden.

"With all possible deference we would like to ask: Why did the department direct the band to furnish the music in the first place? Why did it undertake to furnish free music to a group who could have paid, and should have been made to pay for their own music if they wanted any?"

In conclusion, Hayden said:

"If the law and the President's policy were treated with decent respect, unseemliness would be avoided and, more important, civilian musicians would not be deprived of their opportunities to earn a living for themselves and their families by an unlawful, and even foolish use of service bands."

The last bombshell of the conference burst mildly yesterday when Mrs. James R. Mahaffy, national chaplain of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Mrs. Sydney R. Gatton, national executive committeewoman, wrote a public letter in which they declared the resolution urging statehood be denied Hawaii was formulated without their knowledge or approval.

Atterbury's Estate Valued at $613,306

Media, Pa., Jan. 30 (AP).—An inventory of the estate of the late W. W. Atterbury, filed today, showed a valuation of $613,306. Gen. Atterbury, a retired president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, died last September 20.

Of the total, $536,245 consisted of securities; $10,666 was in cash and the remainder was in personal effects, life insurance and kindred property.

He owned 7,577 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock, valued at $201,737; 6,000 shares of Pennroad Corporation stock, valued at $14,250; 500 shares of Norfolk & Western Railroad Co. stock, valued at $92,625. His yacht, Arminia, was valued at $48,000.

Sing Sing Death House Gets Poison Murderess

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 30 (AP).—The women's section of the Sing Sing Prison death house, vacant since last July, today was opened to receive Mrs. Mary Frances Creighton, convicted Long Island poison murderess, mother of two children.

Mrs. Creighton arrived from Mineola a few hours after she was sentenced with Edward C. Appelgate, 36, former salesman, to die in the electric chair in the week of March 9 for the murder of Appelgate's 260-pound wife.

New York Strikes Threaten 137,000

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Labor leaders marshaled their forces tonight for a series of threatened walkouts that may embrace more than 137,000 workers during the next few days. If carried out, the strikes would affect three industries—dressmakers, fur workers and building service employes.

Police headquarters made arrangements to cope with any eventuality as the week-end "deadlines" approached.

The largest of the three impending struggles is that between 105,000 dressmakers and their employers.

Preliminary walkouts already have been called by the Building Service Union and leaders were preparing to call more than 20,000 workers off their jobs in 1,200 buildings on Monday.

Most conspicuous of the targets coming under the aim of this organization, although it involves only 320 workers, was the lofty Empire State Building, tallest in the world. Alfred E. Smith, president of the corporation that owns the building, was charged with "ignoring" the union's demands.

205 Perish in Fire At Colliery in India

London (Friday), Jan. 31 (AP).—The News Chronicle's correspondent at Calcutta reported today that 5 Europeans and 200 Indians perished yesterday in a fire at the Loyabad Colliery, Jharia, in Bihar Province.

The dispatch said 21 Indians have been rescued so far from the burning colliery. Flames bursting from two pit heads heralded the underground disaster, the article said.

Arms Inquiry Funds Voted

the day by Chairman Byrnes, of the Committee on Audit and Control. Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, immediately attempted to amend the resolution to provide that no Senate committee be allowed to receive funds from the WPA or from any private or public source other than the Senate itself.

Byrnes said he had no objection to the purpose of the resolution, but he pointed out that from time to time Senate committees had received assistance from other Government departments. Nye declared that he had received offers of thousands of dollars from private sources, but that these offers had been refused. Among the offers received by Nye was that of the Rev. Father Charles F. Coughlin, who offered $10,000 to continue the hearings.

Chairman Wheeler, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, objected to the McKellar amendment on the ground that it might interfere with an investigation by his committee.

Neither Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, nor Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, most active opponents of the Nye committee, was in the Senate when the discussion started, but, when Connally came in during the discussion he did not immediately obtain the floor. Because there would apparently be prolonged debate, Byrnes finally withdrew the resolution for the appropriation.

When Byrnes again brought up the resolution later in the day, McKellar amended his resolution to provide that it should not prevent a Senate committee from using the services of a Government department. With this change, the appropriation resolution, as amended by McKellar was adopted.

Connally introduced into the record correspondence intended to show that the Munitions Committee did not have the consent of the heirs of the estate of Robert Lansing, war-time Secretary of State, to withdraw the Lansing diary from the Library of Congress. He declared that the diary was obtained by forceful process.

Was to Be Secret 20 Years.

Lansing had provided that the diary should not be made public until 20 years after his death. Nye had obtained portions of the diary and had circulated it among Senators but had not made it public. It purported to show that Lansing had knowledge of secret treaties among the Allies shortly after the United States entered the war.

Nye denied that a confidence had been betrayed and added that he believed Lansing's purpose would have been well served by publication of the documents now. He demanded to know why there was such a desire for secrecy of public documents. He said he did not understand why when a man who made history dies that history should die with him.

Commenting on the deficit of the Munitions Committee, Nye remarked that a committee of which Connally was chairman had reported a deficit of $5,000 when it investigated a Louisiana election.

Wilson Policy Shown.

Meanwhile, hitherto secret documents made public at the State Department showed how Woodrow Wilson guided the country's neutrality policy in the early days of the war. The documents included an outline of an early note to Germany protesting unrestricted submarine warfare. The note was drafted by Wilson.

The draft, dated April 22, 1915, was the result of the death of Leon Chester Thrasher, an American citizen, in the sinking of the British vessel Falaba by a German submarine.

The Wilson note to William Jennings Bryan, then Secretary of State, said:

"Although I have been silent for a long time about the case, I have had it much on my mind, as I have no doubt you have, to work out some practicable course of action with regard to the death of Thrasher; and I have the following to suggest as an outline of a note to the German government:

"1. State the circumstances, as we have officially received them.

Acknowledgement Asked.

"2. We take it for granted that Germany has had no idae of changing the rules (or rather the essential principles) of an international law with regard to the safety of non-combatants and of the citizens of neutral countries at sea, however radical the present change in practical conditions of warfare; and that she will, in accordance with her usual frankness in such matters, acknowledge her responsibility in the present instance.

"(3) Raise in a very earnest, though of course entirely friendly, way the whole question of the use of submarines against merchant vessels, calling attention circumstantially to the impossibility of observing the safeguards and precautions so long and so clearly recognized as imperative in such matters: The duty of visit and search; the duty, if the vessel proves to belong to an enemy and cannot be put in charge of a prize crew, to secure the safety of the lives of those on board, etc.

"(4) On these grounds enter a very moderately worded, but nonetheless solemn and emphatic protest against the whole thing, as contrary to laws based, not on mere interest or convenience, but on humanity, fair play, and a necessary respect for the rights of neutrals.

"My idea, as you will see, is to put the whole note on very high grounds—not on the loss of this single man's life, but one the interests of mankind which are involved and which Germany has always stood for; on the manifest impropriety of a single nation essaying to alter the understandings of nations; and as all arising out of her mistake in employing an instrument against her enemy's commerce which it is impossible to employ in that use in accordance with any rules that the world is likely to be willing to accept."

Mrs. Root Held Guilty in Party Death of Mate

Widow Faces 10 Years; Stoic After Verdict Is Announced.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 30.—Daisy Alexander Root was convicted of second degree murder here today and her punishment fixed at ten years' imprisonment for the slaying of her young husband, Brenton Root, following a night club quarrel over a "cigarette girl."

Without a show of emotion, the comely, 30-year-old widow heard the jury's verdict as she sat with her 4-year-old son, George, on her lap. Told that she could continue at liberty under $7,500 bond pending a hearing of a motion for a new trial, February 20, she walked from the courtroom without comment.

Earlier in the day she had said:

"It doesn't matter what the verdict is—everything is over for me—I failed to make my marriage a go."

The defendant said she had clung to her husband "as long as it was humanly possible" so that her son could be reared "with both a father and mother to guide him." She tried, she said, because she was the child of divorced parents, "and I was willing to undergo anything to avoid a divorce."

With her witnesses calling the slain Brenton Root "a playboy" and a "woman chaser," the defendant pleaded self-defense and said she shot after her husband "reached for his gun."

"A cold-blooded slaying," the State called it.

The verdict was announced shortly after 2 p. m. today.

Brenton Root, 32, son of the Rev. Benjamin Franklin Root, Chicago clergyman and former Protestant Episcopal Archdeacon for West Tennessee, was shot to death at his country home here November 3.

His widow confessed she went to his home in a jealous rage, awakened him, called him "honey," and shot him to death with a pistol he had taught her to fire.

On the witness stand she said her husband had called Lucile Underwood, red-haired "cigarette girl," by "sweet names" at the night club party preceding the slaying.

The party was arranged to celebrate the reconciliation of the Roots after an estrangement Mrs. Root said was forced by her husband's affairs with other women and beatings and abuses she said he heaped upon her.

2 Stavisky Children, Governess Menaced

Paris, Jan. 30 (AP).—Newspapers reported today that letters threatening Claude and Micheline Stavisky, children of the late swindler, Serge Stavisky, had been received by their governess, but she denied reports that kidnaping was threatened.

The mother, Mme. Arlette Stavisky, recently acquitted in the collapse of her husband's bogus financial empire, is in New York.

The newspapers quoted Camille Francois, the governess, as saying the letter writers called her a "receiver of stolen goods" and threatened to make trouble for the children.

Judge Is Dismissed On Misconduct Charge

Manila, P. I., Jan. 30 (AP).—Judge Geronimo Paredes of the Court of First Instance, Iloilo, was dismissed from office today by President Manuel Quezon, after the Commonwealth Supreme Court found him guilty of grave misconduct. He is the brother of Quintin Paredes, Philippines resident commissioner at Washington.

Charges against the jurist involved improper loans to his wife and father-in-law from persons interested in cases in his court.

Finns Move to Collect From U. S. for Ships

Helsingfors, Finland, Jan. 30 (AP).—Finnish shipchandlers demanded today that their government ask the United States to authorize Finland to compensate them for damages allegedly suffered when 13 Finnish sailing ships were confiscated in 1918 by American authorities.

The shipchandlers seek compensation of 73,000,000 Finnish marks (about $1,533,000) and proposed that this amount be transferred to them from Finnish war debt payments to the United States.

Ronald Coleman Hurt In Knife-Throwing Act

Hollywood, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Ronald Coleman, British actor, was injured slightly tonight when a knife-thrower missed his mark while enacting a scene in "Under Two Flags," and the heavy knife struck sideways on Coleman's chest.

He was treated on the lot, and physicians said the injury was not serious. The knife had been deflected by a post.

Kidnap Hunt

3—That John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., shipbuilder, was convicted not of perpetrating a hoax on the Lindberghs, but of having had actual contact with a gang of kidnapers.

Challenges Lindbergh Action.

"If Col. Lindbergh was convinced that Dr. Condon had actually had contact with the kidnapers, why did he enter into negotiations with Curtis?" the Governor asked.

"What did Curtis say, or show, to Col. Lindbergh that warranted his belief that Curtis actually was in touch with the criminals?"

He also raised the point that "J. J. Faulkner" had exchanged $2,980 of the ransom money at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York, and that the handwriting on the deposit slip was admittedly not Hauptmann's.

"Has the search for Faulkner been discontinued. And why?"

Text of Hoffman's Letter Reopening Lindbergh Kidnaper Search

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 30.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's statement setting forth the evidence he believes "incontrovertible as proof that more than one person should be brought to the bar of justice" in the Lindbergh kidnaping follows:

DR. JOHN F. CONDON.

The following telephone conversation was reported by Dr. Condon to the Department of Justice. The phone rang at the doctor's residence at 7 p. m., March 11, 1932:

Dr. Condon—Hello.

Man—Is this Dr. Condon?

Doctor—Yes.

Man—I saw your ad in the paper. Did you gotted my note?

Doctor—Yes; I received it.

Man—Stay in every night this week from 6 to 12. You will receive another note and act accordingly.

Doctor—I will.

(At this point in the conversation Dr. Condon heard what appeared to be male Italian voices coming from place where man was calling. Condon distinctly heard someone, not the man he was talking to, say: "Statti citto," which is Italian for the American expression "shut up.")

Doctor—Where are you calling from?

Man—Westchester Square.

Condon Wasn't Sure.

(May have been Westchester instead of Westchester Square. Doctor is not sure that it is. Man then hung up.)

On page 37, Liberty Magazine, February 1, Dr. Condon reports this same conversation as follows:

"I took up the receiver: 'Who is it, please?'

"The guttural voice with the pronounced German accent that Mrs. Condon had described said:

"'Did you get my letter with the signature?'

"The word 'signature' was pronounced 'sing-nature.'

"Carefully as I listened I studied pronunciation, inflection, accent.

"'Yes,' I replied. 'I got your letter.'

"'I saw your ad,' said the guttural voice, in crisp clear tones, 'in the New York American.'

"'Yes,' I determined on a bold move. 'Where are you calling from?' I demanded sharply.

"'Westchester.'

"There was a pause. Then the voice said: 'Dr. Condon do you sometimes write pieces for the papers?'

"Puzzled at this strangely irrelevant question; I nevertheless answered promptly:

"'Yes, I sometimes write articles for the papers.'

Hears Another Voice.

"Again there was a pause. And again the voice spoke. But this time it did not speak to me. Its tones were dimmer as a man's tones dim when he turns his head from the mouthpiece of a phone at which he stands to talk to someone standing nearby. And I realized with a sudden shock that the kidnaper was talking to a companion. For I heard him announce to someone—some third person—the gist of my reply. I heard him say:

"'He says sometimes he writes pieces for the papers.' About 1:30 p. m. on or about March 21, 1932, an unknown woman entered a charity bazaar, according to Dr. Condon and had the following conversation with him:

Doctor—Yes, are you interested in a violin?

Woman—I might like to purchase one.

Doctor—(Gave sales talk on the violins he had for sale.)

Woman—(Came close to doctor and spoke in low voice) "Nothing can be done until the excitement is over. There is too much publicity. Meet me in the depot at Tuckahoe on Wednesday at 5 o'clock and I will have a message for you. It is too dangerous to talk here. Keep advertising in the home news."

(Condon says he went to Tuckahoe but woman didn't show up. Hours of trip unknown.)

On page 31, Liberty, January 25, 1936: Dr. Condon writes:

"That is why I am still convinced that more than one person is involved in this crime."

In his signed statements given to police officials Dr. Condon frequently quotes "John" as saying: "There is two womens and four men in the gang," "My father would schmack me down," "No. 1—the boss," "the official," etc. These may be attributed to a desire on the part of the kidnaper or ransom negotiator to throw Dr. Condon and officials off the track.

In a signed statement, taken by Lieut. Keaton of the New Jersey State Police on May 13, 1932, Dr. Condon said, in reply to the question "How many telephone calls did you receive?" "Two, both of them stating that I would receive a written communication and in both places there were a number of people talking. They were directing John in the same room."

In a letter addressed to the New York Times, and dated December 27, 1935, Dr. Condon makes this declaration:

"I worked assiduously to restore the baby, or run down the cowardly knave who climbed a ladder which the carpenter had planned and submitted to the cabinetmaker, both of whom I know, and which ladder the heartless carpenter nailed together in three sections, to carry out his nefarious scheme."

(Photostat copy of original Condon letter is in my possession.)

On Friday, December 13, at Lynn, Mass., Dr. Condon made the statement that he had been offered a quarter of a million dollars to change his testimony and place blame for the crime on Isadore Fisch. (Verification of this statement is in my possession.)

QUERIES—Who were the Italians who were talking with and apparently directing "John" as he held his telephone conversation with Dr. Condon?

Who was the person who told "John" to ask Dr. Condon if he wrote for the newspapers?

Who was the woman who talked with Dr. Condon at the Bazaar?

Is not Dr. Condon, whose word was so greatly relied upon by the prosecution, believed when he says, "I am still convinced that more than one person is involved in this crime?"

Why did Dr. Condon, under oath, deny knowing the name of the cabinet maker who built the box to contain the ransom money, when this man (Samuelsohn) says Dr. Condon has known him for years and when he not only placed with him the order for the original box, but for a duplicate?

Why was Samuelsohn not called upon to testify when he says that Hauptmann ordered the wood cut for the ladder, but that two other men called for the completed work?

Why was not Condon called upon by State officials to explain his attempted bribe for $250,000 since the person who made this order obviously could not have been Hauptmann, who was in jail?

COL. H. SCHWARZKOPF.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, SR.

Col. Lindbergh, appearing before the Bronx County grand jury on September 26, 1934, said:

"Shortly after we first stopped the car out opposite the florist shop, a man walked by who I feel sure was one of the actual group of kidnapers or connected with them. He again came back on the opposite side of the street just before Dr. Condon returned to get the money and then went again down Wittemore street so that I saw one man twice and I heard the voice of one man at a distance."

At the same hearing a grand juror asked, "Did you see anybody on that occasion with a handkerchief that he dropped, on the occasion of your paying over this money?"

Col. Lindbergh answered:

"Yes, I did, shortly after I parked the car in front of the florist shop Dr. Condon got out of the car and found the note, one of the group, under a stone near the table in front of the florist shop, according to directions in previous notes. He returned to the car with that note and as he was reading it a man walked by the car coming from the direction in which the car was pointed and as he passed the car or during the time that he was nearest enough to see him very clearly, he covered his face, rather part of his face with a handkerchief and as he passed he looked first at Dr. Condon and then inside the car at me and then he went on the side walking down

Returns on Run.

"Just before Dr. Condon returned from having met the man and made the payment this same man came running back on the other side of the street on the cemetery side; he stopped or paused then as he crossed Wittemore street, looking first backward at the car and then around and then in all directoins. He then began walking rapidly so he passed the car again, this time on the other side of the street, going in the other direction, covering his face with the handkerchief and he blew his nose very loudly after he had passed far enough. I had no direct view of his face; he removed the handkerchief and with a quick motion threw it down with his left hand into a lot—an open lot—opposite the side of Tremont from the florist shop. Does that answer your question?"

In a statement made to Inspector Harry W. Walsh on May 20, 1932, Col. Lindbergh said, referring to the visit to St. Raymond's Cemetery on the night the ransom money was paid:

"The doctor returned to the car and we read the contents of the note with a flashlight. He said that he was taking an unnecessary long time and standing outside the car for a purpose. He indicated that this reason was to give the kidnapers an opportunity to identify him. Several people had passed by on the sidewalk when a man appeared walking along the sidewalk opposite to the direction in which the car was stationed. He walked with an unusual gait rather awkwardly and with a pronounced stoop. His hat was pulled down over his eyes. As he passed the car he covered his mouth and the lower part of his face with a handkerchief, and looked at Dr. Condon and at me. He continued along Tremont and passed out of sight. This man wore a brown suit and a brown felt hat. He was about 5 feet 8 inches or 9 inches tall, weight about 150 to 160 pounds."

Another Statement Quoted.

Later, in the same signed statement to Inspector Walsh, Col. Lindbergh said:

"A few minutes later he (Condon) came into view walking back along Tremont on the cemetery side and turned down Whittemore and again passed out of sight. Approximately 15 minutes later the same man whom I have described appeared on the cemetery side of Tremont running in the direction of Whittemore. When he came to Whittemore he stopped running and when midway across Whittemore he hesitated, looked down Whittemore back along Tremont and then continued in a walk along Tremont, passing the car on the opposite side of Tremont. As he passed the car he covered his face with a handkerchief and blew his nose so loudly that it could be distinctly heard across the street where I was parked and undoubtedly a considerably greater distance. At this time Dr. Condon reappeared walking up Whittemore. After blowing his nose the man whom I have described brought his left hand down quickly and instead of placing his handkerchief in his pocket threw it down beside the sidewalk."

The presence of a man and a little girl in the vicinity of St. Raymond's Cemetery was mentioned in both statements of Col. Lindbergh and Dr. Condon. In the Walsh statement Col. Lindbergh said:

"When the voice called from the cemetery the man with the little girl previously mentioned turned quickly, watched Dr. Condon pass down Whittemore, and then walked rapidly out of sight along the cemetery side of Tremont avenue."

Statements made by Col. Lindbergh at the Curtis trial:

(Page 124.) "I have always believed that Dr. Condon was in contact with the true kidnapers or people whom they had been in contact with."

(Page 140.) "At one time when I was with Dr. Condon I saw a man who (the stoop-shouldered man with the handkerchief), in my mind, was one of the group of kidnapers."

(Page 141.) "Dr. Condon, I believe, is still working with the authorities in various ways to contact and locate the people who were in contact with him."

(Page 146, speaking of the man contacted by Dr. Condon.) "I believe that he indicated that he was an emissary, but the conclusion that we reached was that he was not, that he was a party."

QUERIES—Who was the "man with the handkerchief?" Since he gave the signals and could not have been the man to whom the ransom money was paid, why is not the search being continued for this man with "a stoop?"

Did the man and the little girl in the vicinity of St. Raymond's Cemetery have any connection with the crime?

What changed Col. Lindbergh's opinion that the crime was perpetrated by a "gang?"

JOHN HUGHES CURTIS:

Curtis was convicted, not as generally supposed, of perpetrating a hoax, but of having actually had contact with a gang of kidnapers and of obstructing justice in that he failed to furnish information that would lead to their apprehension. He named these kidnapers as "John," Sam Truesdale, John Larsen, "Nils," "Eric," "Hilda" and an "Inez."

On page 17 of the transcript of testimony in the Curtis case, you will find that Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon County, in addressing the jury, said:

"And furthermore, we will prove to you that John Hughes Curtis was actually in contact with the kidnapers, that he knew who they were, and that he knew their whereabouts."

On page 20 he is quoted as saying, "We will prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Curtis was dealing with the kidnapers, that he knew who they were, and where they were at the time the little baby's body was found in a decomposed state along the road."

Lindbergh Voiced Belief.

It was brought out in the course of the trial that Curtis had told Col. Lindbergh that a member of his household had aided in the abduction. This is significant in view of the fact that Col. Lindbergh later testified, under oath:

"I could offer no distinct reason for believing that Mr. Curtis has not been in contact with these people and according to the information he had given me, in my mind, he certainly was either in contact directly or indirectly with people who had possession of our child. I felt it was essential to devote every effort to find out who those people were and if possible to bring about a return of the baby. And if not, to bring about their apprehension."

During the course of the trial Frank Wilson, of the intelligence unit, and Capt. Lamb, of the New Jersey State police, expressed the belief that the crime had been perpetrated by a "gang" of kidnapers.

It was not until March 22, 1932, that Curtis visited the home at Hopewell and gave his story to Col. Lindbergh, yet Dr. Condon reports that on March 12, at Woodlawn Cemetery, "John" said to him, "Tell Col. Lindbergh he's wasting his time with those people down 'soud;' they are not the 'ride' parties."

Later in this same interview, Dr. Condon says that John in response to his question, "Where is the baby?" replied, "It is not up North or in Norfolk."

Questions Lindbergh's Procedure.

QUESTION:

If Col Lindbergh was convinced that Dr. Condon had actually had contact with the kidnapers, why did he enter into negotiations with Curtis.?

What did Curtis say, or show, to Col. Lindbergh that warranted his belief that Curtis actually was in touch with the criminals?

Is it not true that Curtis gave a description of "John" similar to the description given by Dr. Condon?

Is it not true that Curtis was at a Philadelphia hotel during, or prior, to the Flemington trial of Hauptmann, that his expenses were paid by the State; that he refused to say that his "John" was not a member of a "gang," and that neither his testimony nor the affidavit that he gave to Assistant Attorney General Peacock were used at the trial?

How did Dr. Condon's "John" know, on March 2, prior to the Curtis negotiations, about "the people down 'soud'" or about "Norfolk?"

Was the State right in obtaining a conviction of Curtis based on obstructing justice after having actually had contact with a gang of kidnapers, or was the State right in prosecuting Hauptmann as a "lone wolf?" Since it is evident that the prosecution was wrong in either one case or the other, is it not obvious that the State and the courts are not infallible and that every possible inquiry is warranted before final action is taken in this important case?

DR. JOHN F. CONDON.

COL. H. N. SCHWARZKOPF, Superintendent of State Police.

April 14, 1932: Said that Harry Fleisher was an important figure in the case. Previously said police had definite reason to believe that Able Wagner, connected with the underworld, was connected with the crime and that they were also searching for members of the Detroit Purple Gang.

All through official releases of Col. Schwarzkopf to the press, he indicated that the police were convinced that a gang of kidnapers was responsible for the crime.

At the time of the death of Violet Sharpe, colonel released statement saying that he felt her death went a long way toward indicating a solution to the crime.

INSPECTOR HARRY WALSH, Of Jersey City Police.

November 17, 1932: In an article written over his signature in Jersey Journal, "I am convinced that Violet Sharpe deceived us, and that she did so deliberately. I am convinced that she was the informant—that agent—of the kidnapers. I believe she committed suicide in panic, fearing her guilt had been discovered, or overburdened with her guilty knowledge after news of the baby's death."

November 21, 1932: "Ordinary police methods were not followed in the Lindbergh case. Neither Violet Sharpe, nor 'Jafsie,' nor anyone else connected with the case—except Curtis and Henry Johnson—was arrested and held pending investigation.

"This is altogether unusual police procedure. The usual police procedure in cases of this kind is to arrest any person suspected of knowing anything about the crime and holding the suspect until he or she has been thoroughly investigated. If this procedure had been followed, Dr. Condon would have been booked as a material witness."

November 23, 1932: "Assuming—as it safely may be—that the intention of the mob was to kidnap the child and hold him for ransom, I feel safe to say that they had a woman prepared to care for the hostage."

BABY'S THUMB GUARD.

On or about April 1, about one month after the crime, Betty Gow found one of the wire thumb guards worn by the child when it was kidnaped, bright and shiny, lying in the path about 100 feet from the gate. Hundreds of police officials, including the 75 "master minds" of the country, reporters, etc., had been over this path and it seems impossible to believe that this article had been permitted to lie there during the one-month period.

Could Hauptmann have possibly returned from the Bronx to throw this thumb guard there? Or was it an accomplice, inside or outside the home?

J. J. FAULKNER.

A man signing his name as "J. J. Faulkner" exchanged $2,950 in gold certificates (all Lindbergh ransom money) at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York. The writing on the slip is admittedly not Hauptmann's.

Has the search for Faulkner been discontinued? And why?

One Dead, 2 Hurt In Accotink Crash

One man was killed and two seriously injured in the collision of an automobile and a truck on the Washington-Richmond highway at Accotink, Va., yesterday.

Joseph Lyde, 30, of Cheraw, S. C., a passenger in the automobile, died in Alexandria Hospital a few hours after the accident. Physicians said both legs had been broken and one of the man's feet so badly crushed that amputation was necessary.

Willis Deavers, 25, of Accotink, driver of the automobile, suffered internal injuries and a fractured right foot. He was taken to the hospital with Lyde.

Fairfax County police were holding the driver of the truck, Bank Wade, 21, of Danville, Va., pending further investigation of the accident. Wade suffered several fractured ribs.

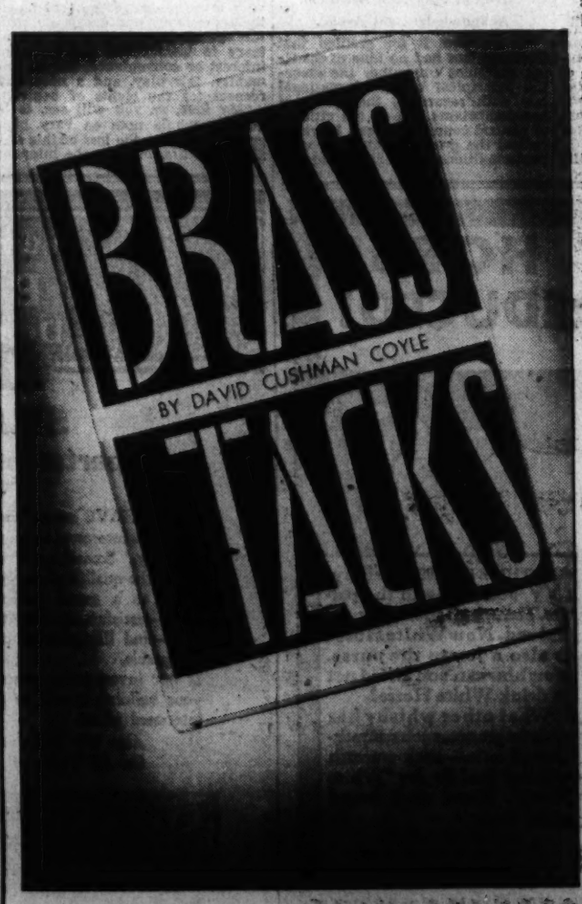
BRASS TACKS
By David Cushman Coyle

On Sale in the Book Store 25c copy



With "BRASS TACKS" the Foundation has entered the "first" field. This book made its initial appearance under the sponsorship of the National Home Library Foundation.

It is a timely commentary on present economic, monetary and administrative trends. It points out how a sound program can be developed to give Americans the four things they want—i. e., a chance to earn a self-respecting income, a reasonable degree of personal security, an enjoyment of the fruits of modern technology, and freedom.

Sino-Japanese Pact Reported Against Russia

Nations Agree on Action to Combat Soviet Military Moves in Mongolia.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Jan. 31.—Japan strengthened her relations with China today and moved to increase fortifications on the western boundary of Manchukuo where Manchu-Japanese troops are facing the Soviet-controlled armies of outer Mongolia.

China, it was reported, has agreed to appoint a pro-Japanese ambassador to Japan, and Tokyo has agreed to appoint a new ambassador to Nanking. Both diplomats will be instructed to carry forward Japan's program for full Chino-Japanese cooperation.

Headquarters of the Japanese Kwantung army in Hsinking, which has charge of the defense of Manchukuo, telegraphed the war office that it is sending additional troops to the outer Mongolian border, southwest of Manchuli, "where the situation continues serious."

The new Chinese ambassador to Japan, it was reported officially from Shanghai, will be Hsu Shih-Yin, chairman of the national relief commission and former premier. He is a leader of the old, pro-Japanese, Anfu clique of north China headmen.

Japan's ambassador in Nanking will be Hachiro Arita, former minister to Belgium.

A primary task of each diplomat will be to eliminate Soviet influence in eastern Asia.

The appointments thus fit into the broad program of Japan's East Asia policy which is to oust Russian Communist penetration of China and the Mongolias and develop these territories as eventual allies for Japan in event there is a new Russo-Japanese war.

Fortified military posts will be built all along a line which Japan considers to be the western border of Manchukuo, it was understood, and future Russo-Mongol invasions into Manchukuo will be suppressed vigorously.

The newspaper Ashai said the Outer Mongol Soviet government has 150,000 troops, of which 50,000 are concentrated on the Manchukuo border. The troops are commanded by Russian Soviet officers and have an elaborate motor transport service consisting of 2,000 automobiles and trucks. The Mongols have only two airplanes, but Moscow has sent them 18 more, for scouting purposes, and supplied aviators and ground crews.

Liberties Union Offers to Aid Mother Deprived of Children

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Mabel Eaton, of Montclair, deprived of custody of her two children in divorce proceedings in which she was accused of communistic beliefs, was offered legal aid today by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Simultaneously, Advisory Master Robert D. Grosman, who awarded the children to the father, Warren P. Eaton, of Bloomfield, denied his ruling was motivated by the mother's political philosophy.

In offering assistance, Roger Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, took exception to making political or religious beliefs the basis for determining custody of children. He said the case might become a precedent for taking children from mothers because of religious differences with their husbands.

Grosman said he was concerned "altogether by her moral beliefs. These to my mind are contrary to the law of the land and contrary to accepted principles of morality."

He said Mrs. Eaton "threw her Christian beliefs overboard" and recalled her testimony to the effect she had no respect for the virtue of women or the institution of marriage. There is nothing new, he said, about a court depriving a mother of custody when it has been found her teachings and conduct would be contrary to the best interests of her children.

He awarded the children to the father with the expressed intention that they be "religiously trained in his faith and brought up as Americans."

Bertram C. Duncan, Bloomfield, Mrs. Eaton's attorney, conferred with Abraham J. Isserman, New Jersey counsel for the Civil Liberties Union, and said he would discuss with Mrs. Eaton whether the offer of aid should be accepted. As yet the mother has not decided whether to appeal, he said.

He said Mrs. Eaton had gone to the home of a sister in the Bronx, N. Y., "to recover from the shock of the decision."

Explaining his ruling in finding Mrs. Eaton unfit to have charge of her children, Grosman said "when she attempts to translate her radical beliefs into direct action by continually scoffing at the belief in a supreme being and at the common standards of morality and virtue in the presence of the children, then of course their morals and spiritual welfare require that they be removed from immediate influence."

Grosman said the children, Mable Florence, 10, and Warren, jr., 5, wanted to be with their father. Both parents had sued for divorce and asked custody of the children.

Serfdom Ended, Hitler Warns were with us" when the Nazis came into power.

But die-hard opponents still remain, he added, "the eternal enemies of our people in our own land."

Younger generations, Hitler asserted, must continue to fight so "gradually one people will emerge: One mind, one spirit, one will and one energy."

In one year after the advent of Nazidom, the Reichschancellor went on, the Nazis won one per cent of the remaining non-Nazis to their cause.

"In two years, 2 per cent," he added, "in 100 years we will have won 100 per cent."

On January 30, 1933, Hitler had declared: "Give us four years and then let them judge us."

"All that I am, I am through you; all that you are, you are through me," he continued. "Never has there been a closer bond between a leader and followers than between you and me.

"Our movement no longer depends upon one person. I was merely one clarion voice which called to millions. You, my Storm Troop comrades, are the guarantors of the future.

"Others are surprised at the miracle of January 30, 1933. Not me. For more than a decade we had looked forward to it confidently."

Before Hitler spoke one of his chief lieutenants, Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, said he was proud to say that Berlin is now a German city with the Jews and Marxists eliminated.

Goebbels, briefly reviewing the events of the past three years, paid tribute to Hitler as "the conscience of the National Socialist revolution," adding:

"The Storm Troop organization accompanies its leader to its last breath in his difficult task, with its love and boundless faith in him."

Hearings Soon On Corporation Bill Promised

O'Mahoney Measure Would Give U. S. Control Over Company Charters.

By the Associated Press.

An early hearing was promised today on a Federal corporation license bill, viewed by its author, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, as "opening the bottleneck for industrial development."

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, announced in the Senate that hearings on the measure would begin soon.

The bill would give the Federal Government authority to impose charters on all corporations doing interstate business. Regulations could be imposed banning employment of child labor and discrimination against female help, guaranteeing labor's right to bargain collectively, and giving all stock in corporations full voting power.

"This is not a new NRA," O'Mahoney told newsmen, adding that it was legislation shaped 30 years ago, to "prevent the sort of business practice which drove us into the depression."

Under the bill's terms the Federal Trade Commission would have authority to deny licenses to a corporation to engage in interstate commerce, unless it drafted a charter incorporating the labor provisions.

Duce Fortifies Home Defense; New Bombings

Frontier Guard Is Created; Advances Are Claimed on All Fronts.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 30.—Benito Mussolini and his cabinet forged a more ironclad internal defense for Italy today, creating a new Alpine division for the Fascist kingdom's mountain frontier, and revamping the high command of the Caribinieri, or national police.

Il Duce also told his ministers that 50,000 additional workmen, en route to East Africa, would permit all services in the Italo-Ethiopian war zone to function, even during the "big" rains, which will begin in the spring.

New Bombings Reported.

New bombings, south of makale on the northern front, and at Daga Medo on the southern front, were reported in a communique from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, high commander in Ethiopia. Badoglio also wirelessed that "many chiefs and lesser chieftains" were included in the 5,000 Ethiopian casualties which he has claimed in recent engagements on the north.

The cabinet council, first of a series of significant Fascist conferences this week and next, approved a variety of financial and other measures, some recalling World war procedure.

But the ministers did not pass upon what all financial circles now are discussing. A projected capital levy consisting of a tax of 25 per cent on the value of all property, to be spread over 10 or 20 years.

Such a tax was levied by the government of the late Giovanni Giolitti, one of the last of the anti-Fascist die-hards, in 1920.

At the same time the authoritative Giornale D'Italia, declaring sanctionists again were raising their heads against Italy, predicted any petroleum embargo would fail because, it said, the kingdom already has provided coverage for her permanent military requirements in the matter of oil, both in Africa and Europe.

Il Duce and his ministers also discussed the French domestic political situation, as it applies to Italy, and dealt with the "responsibility" of British warships in the Mediterranean for any possible spread of the Ethiopian conflict to Europe.

Discrimination In Aid Charged By Vandenberg

U. S. Relief Among States Ranges 40 to 98%, Senator Charges.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, made a brief attack on the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in the Senate yesterday, charging that it discriminated among States in the matter of Federal aid.

The Michigan Senator introduced into the record a statement showing that the Federal relief contributions to States ranged from 40 per cent of the total cost to more than 98 per cent.

"This is contrary to the spirit of republican institutions," he said.

Vandenberg asked that the figures go to the Appropriations Committee for consideration when the relief appropriation comes before the committee. He said he wanted a legislative formula for the distribution of Federal relief funds to States.

In this connection it was recalled that several weeks ago Harry L. Hopkins, Relief Administrator, charged that Kansas, under Gov. Alf M. Landon, had not contributed "one red cent" to the relief program.

The figures submitted by Vandenberg did not distinguish between amounts contributed by States and the amounts contributed by local communities. The figures showed the Government had contributed 73 per cent to the cost of relief in Kansas.

ENGLISH OVERCOATS
Tailored by "Lees of Galashiels"

$47.50

If these coats had arrived before Christmas, they would have sold for $75 . . . and next Winter, coats of these same fine fabrics and tailoring will be $75 or more.

Last week, the importer telephoned us from New York, saying the shipment of fine English overcoats he had expected in December had just arrived. He was unwilling to carry them over until next Fall, so he would give us a generous price concession if we would take them this season.

Knowing that at least two months of overcoat weather faced Washington men, and realizing that the quality of these English coats promised several Winters of wear—we told him to send them to us and we would offer them at such a low price that Washington men would see the unusualness of the value and avail themselves of this opportunity to buy a fine English overcoat at a price that would be low even for a good domestic coat.

The fabrics are fine Scotch fleeces and worsted-back cheviots. The tailoring, by Lees of Galashiels, is of the same high character that has made these splendid coats so eagerly sought after. Truly, English overcoats of this quality at $47.50 are more than "news of the moment" . . . they are notable among the season's most outstanding values.

Also, 25 "Lees of Galashiels" Overcoats that would regularly be $85—on sale at $57.50

Washington Hotel. She made the trip in an automobile. There she was received in the Hall of Nations by Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, in a distinctive gown of black velvet and red; Mrs. James S. Taylor, Mrs. Chatfield-Taller and Mrs. Francis Winslow.

Necklace Stirs Crowd.

The necklace which Mrs. Roosevelt was wearing had aroused considerable interest by this time, and the women in her party were being called upon for its history.

The tiger claws which made up the necklace, it was explained, came from a man-killer which the First Lady's father, Elliott Roosevelt, had killed on an expedition to Africa. He gave the necklace to the mother of the First Lady as an engagement present.

At the Mayflower Hotel, Mrs. Roosevelt was greeted by Mrs. Harold Walker, of the receiving line; Mrs. Wilson Lee, wearing greyish green velvet; Mrs. Hamilton Lewis and Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army. Mrs. Craig wore cream-colored brocade. Mrs. Frederick Faust, Mrs. Montgomery Blair and Miss Patricia Ridsdale also were in the receiving line.

Speaks at Mayflower.

Mrs. Roosevelt made a speech at the Mayflower, thanking those present for helping the President's favorite charity.

From the Mayflower she went to the Wardman Park Hotel. She arrived just as a colored youngster was singing what is know in the trade as a scat song. Applause broke out as she entered, but the youth continued to the end.

Mrs. Roosevelt was greeted by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, who was wearing a dress of black lace, with her were Miss Freda Frazer and Miss Diana Rowland.

The last scene took place at the Shoreham. Here the receiving line was composed of Mrs. Jomes Alexander Lyon, wearing red chiffon with clips and bracelets of diamonds; Mrs. Albert Walker, Mrs. Goring Bliss, wearing gold lame; Miss Gertrude Faust, Miss Mary Cowles, Miss Ruth Sowers and Mrs. Millard West.

Crowd Makes History.

The biggest crowd in the history of the Shoreham Hotel packed the ballroom. A birthday cake had been prepared and eight waiters started with it toward Mrs. Roosevelt's table. They were almost floored by the crowd.

As Mrs. Roosevelt cut the cake, the pieces were thrown to the crowd at large.

Many of the celebrants were autograph hunters. They did not besiege Mrs. Roosevelt so much, probably because she was guarded by military aids and police. But they did swarm around Ginger Rogers and Guy Lombardo.

It required 10 minutes to open a lane for Miss Rogers at Wardman Park Hotel. She was nervous when she approached the microphone, and she explained why in these words:

"If I look a little mussed up it's because I'm jittery. I just went to the White House and met the President. It sure is a thrill to be on this program."

Allen Jubilant.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who was in charge of the celebration, jubilantly announced:

"It was the biggest thing that ever was. It was marvelous."

Of the money raised here, 30 per cent will go to the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia and 70 per cent to the Children's Hospital here.

President Roosevelt remained at the White House, surrounded by his old "gang" of war-time days, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. At 11:30 he talked over the radio, thanking the millions who had celebrated his birthday.

In New York the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, was the guest of honor at a birthday ball in the Waldorf-Astoria. With her were Mrs. John Boettiger, the former Anna Roosevelt Dall, and James Roosevelt, jr., two of her grandchildren.

The Waldorf guests, for the most part, ordered scrambled eggs, the President's favorite dish. Anticipating their taste, the hotel put in a supply of 7,000 eggs.

Former Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York, was among those who danced that thousands might walk. He attended the party at the Central Park Casino, where Joseph Lapima, 19-year-old Brooklyn boy crippled by infantile paralysis, appeared on the program as a singer.

The birthday ball at Newport, R. I., was perhaps the most fashionable in the country, but the idea behind it was the same—help for the victims of infantile paralysis.

Mrs. Roosevelt's dress last night was a cream satin brocade made on simple lines with a train. She wore a lace fichu about her neck. Over this she wore an evening wrap of white with a large white fox collar.

With Mrs. Roosevelt were Miss Nancy Cook, Miss Marion Dickerman, Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider and Miss Margaret Le Hand.

The dance music played last night was broadcast over one of the greatest radio hook-ups in history. Nearly 500 stations, including many independent ones, carried the President's brief talk and then put on the air the music of orchestras led by the following men:

Guy Lombardo, Nat Harris, Jack Hylton, Tom Dorsey, Eddie Duchin, Enrique Madiguera, Little Jack Little, Isham Jones, Ted Weems, Ray Noble, Glen Gray and Emil Coleman.

Text of Roosevelt Birthday Message

The text of President Roosevelt's fifty-fourth birthday radio address last night, in behalf of the efforts to raise money to fight infantile paralysis, follows:

Tonight, on my fifty-fourth anniversary, I am very happy because Col. Doherty, Carl Byoir and Keith Morgan tell me that their reports indicate that this year's celebration, in the interest of continued efforts against infantile paralysis, will exceed our fondest hopes.

Tonight, in ever State and in every outlying Territory of our Nation, many millions of people are enjoying themselves at all kinds of local parties. They have resolutely aligned themselves to carry on the fight against infantile paralysis until this dread and costly disease is brought under definite and final control.

Dedicated to Sole Purpose.

Ten years ago, it was made possible for me, with the support of many personal friends, to start the work of the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia and I dedicated it to one sole purpose—to apply itself to the task and keep everlastingly on the job, not by itself alone, but with the co-operation of the doctors, the Orthopedic hospitals and those thousands of individuals on whose shoulders falls the brunt of caring for several hundred thousands of the afflicted.

No single agency, whether it be the doctor, the hospital or the research laboratory, can cope individually with this great problem—we can do it only by joining our efforts.

Without your local committees, the national committee could not function. You tonight who are attending these celebrations, and you who are in your homes, have greatly helped to make a reality of what was once only a hope. In nearly 7,000 communities you are helping to produce concrete results by making it possible for large numbers of those who suffer from physical handicap caused by infantile paralysis to receive aid and assistance.

Lives Made Easier.

The lives of these people, young and old, will be made easier. Through rehabilitation, by far the greater part of them will become more mobile and will take their places in active life once again with their heads lifted high and their courage unabated.

I am confident that each local committee will work out, with the best medical advice, plans for the wise administering of the 70 per cent of the funds which, as a result of this year's birthday parties, will remain in your community for expenditure.

The 30 per cent of the funds which you will send to the National committee will be used by the foundation to intensify the National part which it is playing in building up Jeremiah Milbank, Dr. Paul De Kruif and the other members of the Research Commission, and all those who, with them, are administering the research activities in connection with the work.

With full confidence and faith in the success we are already attaining, I re-dedicate the foundation to the task which lies ahead.

Made Very Happy.

I wish I could look into your faces tonight. You have made me very happy—more happy than I can express in words. Know and feel that I deeply and sincerely appreciate all that you have done for the cause—all of the inspiration which you have applied to it. I am especially grateful, not only to the National committee, but to the local chairmen of the local committes who have worked so hard, and also to the press, to the radio, and to the newsreels who have visualized for the whole country the need and the reasons for this great National campaign.

To several hundred thousand victims of infantile paralysis, I send very personal greetings, especially to the youngsters among them whose lives lie ahead of them. It is in their behalf that I thank you once more.

U.S. Is Thanked By President In Radio Talk

Record Hook-up Heard at 6,000 Balls; Messages, Gifts Received.

On his fifty-fourth birthday, President Roosevelt last night interrupted his own party with his "old gang" at the White House to call on the Nation for a co-ordinated effort against infantile paralysis.

In a brief radio talk when his words were carried to 6,000 "birthday balls" at which an estimated 5,000,000 men and women danced, and to the balance of the Nation listening at home, Mr. Roosevelt expressed his appreciation of the celebrations to raise funds to combat the disease.

The message, over the largest radio hook-up of stations in the history of radio, came as Mrs. Roosevelt was completing her round of the six celebrations here. It asked co-ordination and aid for those bearing "the brunt of caring for several hundred thousand of the afflicted."

The President, a victim of infantile paralysis 16 years ago, said:

"To several hundred thousand victims of infantile paralysis, I send very personal greetings, especially to the youngsters among them whose lives lie ahead of them. It is in their behalf that I thank you once more."

The President cut his birthday cake earlier as he gathered with intimate friends of his 1920 Vice Presidential campaign, "the gang." He received thousands of gifts and messages of congratulation.

Washington Kiwanians Felicitate Roosevelt

A telegram congratulating President Roosevelt on his birthday anniversary was sent to the White House yesterday by the Washington Kiwanis Club.

At its meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, the club members contributed $25 to be used for aiding crippled children.

Roosevelt Asks Promotionof12 Army Officers

Col. Sunderland Is Named New Chief of Coast Artillery Corps.

Promotion of 12 high-ranking officers of the Army was recommended to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt on the suggestion of Secretary of War Dern.

In the list was the recommendation that Col. Archibald H. Sunderland, president of the Coast Artillery Board, Fort Monroe, Va., be made chief of Coast Artillery for a term of four years, with the rank of major general.

Other recommendations were:

To be major generals of the line: Brig. Gen. Henry W. Butner, commanding the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.; Brig. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commanding the First Infantry, First Division, New York City; Brig. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, assistant chief of staff in charge of War Plans Division, and Brig. Gen. Herbert J. Brees, commanding the general staff school, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Four Brigadiers Named.

To be brigadier generals of the line: Col. Daniel Van Voorhis, chief of staff of the Hawaiian Department; Col. Walter S. Grant, acting commandant of the Army War College, Fort Humphreys, Va.; Col. Ben Lear, Cavalry, chief of staff, Ninth Corps area, San Francisco, and Col. George R. Spalding, division engineer, North Atlantic Division, New York City.

Brig. Gen. Henry Gibbins, of Washington, assistant quartermaster general, was recommended for quartermaster general with the rank of major general; Col. Augustus B. Warfield, Jeffersonville, Ind., was recommended for assistant quartermaster general with the rank of brigadier general, and Col. Frederick W. Boschen, San Francisco, was recommended to be chief of finance with the rank of major general.

Col. Sunderland is a member of the class of 1900 of the Military Academy. During the war he served as director of the Heavy Artillery School at Mailly, France. He has served also in Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

Gen. Butner served in the Field Artillery during the World War and for his service he received the Silver Star Citation of the United States and was also awarded the Croix de Guerre with Palm.

Was Decorated.

Gen. Ford has been in the service since 1898 and during the World War he was chief of staff of the Twenty-seventh Division, which was credited with breaking the Hindenburg line. For his service during the World War he was decorated by France, Belgium, Spain, and he received the Distinguished Service Medal from the United States.

During the World War Gen. Embick served as a member of the supreme war council and after the war was a member of the peace commission. He also served in the Spanish-American War.

Gen. Brees has served with the Army since 1898, and for gallantry in action during the World War he received the Silver Star Citation as well as the Distinguished Service Medal.

Col. Van Voorhis served for a time during the World War as chief of staff at the port of embarkation, Newport News, Va., and for his service in governing troop movements and in moving supplies to the front he was decorated by the Government.

In his years with the service, Col. Grant has served in the Philippines, on the Mexican border and in France. He was cited for work in planning the staff work preliminary to the St. Mihiel and Argonne-Meuse offensives during the World War.

Served Overseas.

Virtually all of the career of Col. Spalding has been spent in the Engineer Corps. He served with this unit in France and in peace times has had charge of construction of numerous dams for the Army.

Col. Warfield served with the Army during the Spanish-American War and saw action in the Philippine insurrection and the World War. Most of his service was with supply divisions and Quartermaster Corps.

Col. Boschen went through the ranks and served during the Philippine insurrection and the World War. After the war, he was assigned to finance work and served in various capacities until 1934, when he was made finance officer of the Ninth Corps Area.

Gen. Gibbins has been in the service since 1898, serving mostly with the Cavalry. In 1922 he was shifted to quartermaster's work and has remained with that unit since then.

Warfield, to be assistant quartermaster general; Col. Frederick W. Boschen, to be chief of finance; Brig. Gen. Henry Gibbins, to be quartermaster general, and Col. Archibald H. Sunderland, to be chief of Coast Artillery.

Aid of Gov. Talmadge Accused

edition, containing reprints of several photographs previously used.

Meanwhile Gov. Talmadge declined to state whether he would permit the use of his name in Georgia or other States as a Presidential candidate. He also refused to state what course he would follow if President Roosevelt is renominated, asserting:

"Take it from me, he's not going to be renominated."

"I guess you smart city fellows," Talmadge said to a group of metropolitan newspapermen who interviewed him en route from the Macon meeting, "think Jim Farley can buy Roosevelt's renomination with that $4,000,000,000.

"Maybe we crossroads farmers are not so smart, but we don't believe Jim Farley can do it."

The Governor said he received a large number of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the country on his speech. He revealed a speaking itinerary for next month, starting at Baltimore on February 8 but would not further disclose his plans.

John H. Kirby, chairman of the Southern Committee for Upholding the Constitution and co-sponsor with Talmadge of the Macon meeting, explained that the indorsement of the Georgia Governor by the "convention" was not binding on any of those present. Actually, he explained, it was an indorsement by the Georgians present.

He said that his organization would make efforts to carry on the campaign against President Roosevelt in every Southern State and that wherever it was possible a candidate for the Democratic nomination would be named against the President. Talmadge's name would be used, he said, in States where the Georgian had a following but that in other States a favorite son may be put on the ballot.

"If the President is renominated, what then?" he was asked.

"Well that situation reminds me of what happened in 1896," he replied. "When William Jennings Bryan was nominated, the gold Democrats bolted. They held a convention which named the Palmer-Buckner ticket, but none ever believed it had a chance of winning. Its purpose was to give those Democrats who disliked Bryan but would not vote for a Republican some place to go. That may be done again."

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 30.—D. Z. Shaffer, of Cashtown, near here, observed his seventieth birthday today by marrying for the fourth time. His bride was Mrs. Mary E. Bahnman, 50, of Chambersburg. The wedding took place at noon at the Shaffer home.

Youth Held Pending Recovery of Victim

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30.—William H. Ardinger, 21, who admitted the shooting of Mrs. Louise Obitts, 26, on a Williamsport street this week, will remain in jail pending the outcome of the victim's wounds, Magistrate Harry L. Harsh ruled at a preliminary hearing.

The woman is in a serious condition at the Washington County Hospital. Ardinger told police he shot the woman because she spurned his attentions.

Factory Re-Opens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Meyersdale, Pa., Jan. 30. — The local shirt factory, which employs about 500 persons, has resumed operations under new management, after a brief shutdown. The Phillips-Jones Corporation, of New York, which ran the plant for seven years, has transferred its interest to a new local organization, the Meyersdale Shirt Co., Inc.

L.A. MacMahon Dead; Capital Writer, Editor

Well Known Reporter Was Identified With All Local Papers.

Louis A. MacMahon, a well-known Capital newspaperman, died yesterday at his home, Vinecroft, Clarendon, Va., after a long illness. Death was caused by heart trouble.

During his career he was identified with all Washington newspapers, and for the last 10 years was Capital reporter for the Washington Herald.

Mr. MacMahon was born in Staunton, Va., in 1882, and was educated in the public schools of Virginia and Georgetown University Law School. During the World War he served with the special intelligence division of the Army.

He was once managing editor of the Richmond News-Leader, and editor of the Newark (N. J.) Press. From 1925 to 1927 he was general manager of the Army and Navy Journal.

In 1920 Mr. MacMahon was publicity director for Gen. Leonard Wood's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. He was a member of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce and was president of the Arlington Investment Corporation.

He is survived by his widow.

Funeral services will be held at noon tomorrow at his late residence.

Snow, Ice Still Block Many Frederick Roads

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 30.—The struggle to keep Frederick County secondary roads open to traffic is continuing with little success, according to highway officials.

As rapidly as roads are opened, the wind blows the snow into new drifts which freeze, making snow plows practically useless in the work.

Added to the difficulties is a lack of labor, due to the intense cold which has discouraged many volunteers. Trucks normally are used in plowing snow from highways, but the fall has been so heavy that tractors must be used. There are but six in the county. Schools are still closed.

Hitlerite Democrats.

The so-called "grass roots" convention of discontented Southern Democrats at Macon has two distinct aspects. One, the political, was emphasized in the speech of Gov. Talmadge, a document without any constructive ideas, calculated to appeal to eighth-grade mentalities, but still entirely justifiable and natural as a protest against an Administration which has sabotaged the principles of the Democratic Party and shown bitter animus against all who question its omniscience.

The other, or social, aspect of this gathering is definitely dangerous. Using evangelical and inflammatory tactics many of the leaders of the convention made abuse of the Administration an excuse for attacking the fundamental American liberties. The studied effort to arouse race prejudice, only partially disavowed by the leaders at Macon; the attempt to stigmatize as "un-American" any idea or individual foreign to the mass thought of Georgia; the unconscious irony with which supporters of Huey Long denounced "socialism"—all these were signs of a crude mob psychology from which nothing but destructive action can be expected.

The country wants no reintroduction of that Klan spirit which was so palpably striving for rebirth at the Macon meeting. And the country will tolerate no development of Nazi attitudes under the specious pretense that this is "Jeffersonian Democracy." Gov. Talmadge is quite shrewd enough to realize that he is playing with fire. And unless his hidden motive is to give aid and comfort to President Roosevelt, he will promptly disown the inescapable impression that he wants to fight the Administration with Klan methods.

Not A Legislative Issue.

Throughout the controversy over the District-Virginia Boundary Commission report it has been evident that the most emphatic support for that biased document comes from individuals who claim property in the disputed area. The fight to establish property rights has clearly overshadowed the very important issue of where the District-Virginia boundary should be.

Disputes over property ownership cannot be properly settled by Congress or any other legislative body. If approval of the commission's report could be interpreted as granting valuable land claimed by the Government to private individuals, a truly ridiculous situation would arise. For the Supreme Court has found that the boundary line is the high-water mark on the south bank of the Potomac, and has adjudicated controversies between private parties accordingly. But the commission's recommendations would extend the rights of private property owners down to the low-water mark, with the line cutting across creeks and inlets from headland to headland.

The House Judiciary Committee should realize that adjudication of property disputes is the function of the courts and not the legislature. Since Congress is interested only in seeing the dispute settled in the most equitable manner, the Smith bill indorsing the boundary report may well be sidetracked in favor of a measure authorizing the Attorney General to bring suit in the Supreme Court against the State of Virginia.

Gold And The Dollar.

During 1935 the net imports of gold into the United States reached the astounding figure of $1,730,000,000. In 1934 and 1935 together, the net inflow amounted to $2,870,000,000, bringing the total value of our gold holdings above $10,000,000,000, or to about 45 per cent of the world's monetary gold stocks.

This maldistribution of gold has added to the other obstacles in the way of a stabilization of world currencies. It has also been largely responsible for the rapid increase in the excess reserves of the country's banks since the dollar was devalued. Hence a reverse movement of gold would be an unmixed blessing if it resulted from a settlement of those political and economic disturbances which have led to a capital flight from European countries to these shores.

Unfortunately, the current weakening of dollar exchange reflects a growing uneasiness abroad concerning the outlook for the dollar instead of any anticipated improvement in the fiscal and political outlook for the continental gold-bloc countries. It is not that their position is getting better, but that the position in this country is getting worse.

Under ordinary conditions a reduction in the huge stocks of gold held in the United States ought to be welcomed as a means of drawing down excess reserves and thus lessening the danger that unutilized credit resources will become the basis for an uncontrollable expansion of domestic credit. The problem of cutting down these reserves, or at least restraining an expansion which has been the result of steady gold accretions, would become less pressing as gold left the country.

Such cheerful reflections, however, assume that there is a determination to protect the dollar against a domestic inflation which would impair its purchasing power and result in a panic flight from the currency. Little consolation can be derived from a sudden weakening of exchange rates clearly due to foreign fears that our spending and monetary policies will lead inevitably to future depreciation of the dollar.

The "Revised" Farm Bill.

Less than a week ago the Senate Agriculture Committee ordered revision of the Bankhead-Jones farm aid bill to bring it within the limits of Congress' legislative authority. A majority of the committee members apparently feared that this measure, if enacted, would meet the same fate as did the AAA. But in the meantime the demand for speedy approval of new agricultural subsidies has become stronger than fears of again encroaching upon the fundamental law. The revised measure, altered chiefly in phraseology, has been overwhelmingly recommended to the Senate.

The bill remains an extensive grant of powers to the Secretary of Agriculture condensed into brief form and general terms. Only two changes appear to merit special attention. The new measure contains a few explanatory sentences obviously inserted for the information of the Supreme Court. It asserts that improper use of the soil impedes the orderly flow of agricultural commodities in the channels of trade; endangers farm purchasing power and "otherwise adversely affects the national welfare." Through some inadvertence this cue referring the court to the "national welfare" clause of the Constitution had been omitted from the previous draft.

A new section is added to indicate the intention of Congress to pass a permanent farm relief measure during the next two years, under which grants would be made to State governments for redistribution to farmers. It must be obvious that no plan which Congress has in mind for adoption two years hence will affect the constitutionality of a very different measure now being railroaded to enactment. Reference to the plan of working out "48 little AAA's" seems to be only a gesture to divert attention from the weakness of the "emergency" measure.

It does not appear, therefore, that the legal basis on which this stop-gap measure rests has been one whit strengthened by the redrafting. It would still authorize the maintenance of farm purchasing power and the adjustment of agricultural output so as to regulate prices through "such rules and regulations as he (the Secretary of Agriculture) deems necessary . . ."

Perhaps the officials who are responsible for this bill think they have found a means of circumventing the plain decision of the Supreme Court. But they would scarcely deny that the end sought is essentially the same as the objective of the unconstitutional AAA. If that is true, they might well read once more that section of the opinion in the Hoosac Mills case, in which the court said: "Congress has no power to enforce its commands on the farmer to the ends sought by the agricultural adjustment act."

Unlike some decisions of the Supreme Court, this opinion did not turn upon technicalities. It went to the very heart of our governmental structure. The court found that

> The act invades the reserved rights of the States. It is a statutory plan to regulate and control agricultural production, a matter beyond the powers delegated to the Federal Government.

Congress cannot ignore that sweeping decision without danger of arousing serious repercussions. If Administration leaders have a workable permanent plan that is not likely to run afoul of the Constitution there seems to be no reason why they should not consider it now, instead of waiting two years. If not, they should courageously face the issue of abandoning Federal farm control or amending the Constitution. Enactment of another stop-gap patently unconstitutional would be indefensible.

New Role For The Marines.

An old tradition has failed: no one dares to tell it to the Marines any more—that is, if what you have to say suggests that all is not absolutely jake with the present Administration. For if you do, they'll pick up their dolls, or rather piccolos, and go home. At least that is what the Marine Band did after the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense had invited them to a party at the Mayflower and they arrived only to discover that a certain Mr. Colby the day before had made an indiscreet speech about the New Deal before the same assemblage.

The good ladies should not miss the significance of this. It means simply that too much peace is not good for Marines. Without even so much as a Nicaragua or a Haiti to practice on, these land-sea-and-air boys tend to grow soft and easily irritable. The Dames of the Loyal Legion and all the other conference members could promote national defense in no better way than by going home and tipping off the men-folk that the Nation's once redoubtable Leathernecks are in danger of becoming Creampuffs.

When Hollywood hears this, Charles Butterworth is going to land a lot of contracts on which Victor McLaglen has had a monopoly heretofore. Down in Quantico, presumably, the baseball diamond is being rolled into a croquet lawn. And as for the Marine Corps' marching song, that, of course, will have to be changed—probably to something like "From the Halls of the Hotel Mayflower to the Shores of Rock Creek-ee. . . "

The Miners' Convention.

The United Mine Workers are adding important pages to the history of American trade unionism in their convention here. Their president, John L. Lewis, is leading the fight for an extension of industrial unionism within the A. F. of L. and there is no doubt that he has the support of the miners in his efforts to make headway against the representatives of craft unionism who dominate the executive council of the federation.

The question before the convention, therefore, is not what to do, but what methods to pursue in fighting a labor leadership which refuses to admit that with the advent of mass production the craft union ceased to be adapted to the needs of the majority of industrial workers. That problem is a vital one since the method of its solution will decide whether industrial unionism is to spread within the existing organization, or whether there is to be an open breach within the ranks of organized labor, as seems likely in view of the developments of yesterday.

Another significant issue before the convention was symbolized by the vitriolic attack upon Al Smith launched by the miners' president for the former's criticism of the Administration. The enthusiastic response to praise of President Roosevelt's policies increases the likelihood that the delegates will definitely indorse his Administration.

Such a departure from traditional aloofness from partisanship would of course be easy to explain. Since the Administration yielded to pressure in urging passage of the Guffey coal bill the union is naturally disposed to throw its political support to those who favor this legislation. The report to the delegates further shows a disposition to curb the power of the Supreme Court in the field of social legislation, which is perhaps explained by the questionable constitutionality of the Guffey measure.

The miners' organized attempt to further the type of unionism which meets the needs of modern industry is altogether commendable. But their disposition to override obstacles which may stand in the way of a legislative program conceived to be in the interest of a particular organized group of workers is a development of a more questionable nature.

The national welfare has already suffered severely at the hands of minority pressure groups which use their influence to secure passage of legislation in their own interests. If the United Mine Workers wish to further the cause of industrial unionism along constructive lines, therefore, they will think twice before contracting any political alliance which makes it appear that they are more interested in State aid than in self-help.

New York's Free Port.

New York City, following the example of various European ports, has been granted permission to establish a free trade zone on Staten Island—the first to be authorized under the Federal foreign trade zone act passed in 1934. The area will embrace five municipally-owned piers—part of a water-front development known as Hylan's "folly."

Facilities will be provided for unloading and storing goods free of duty until they are wanted for export or released for domestic use on payment of duty. Moreover, it will eventually be possible under the law to perform various processing operations, such as mixing, cleaning and grading within the area. This is a much simpler and less expensive process than submitting to customs inspection and prior payment of duties, subject to drawback upon exportation.

Fearing that the New York free zone might draw business away from other ports, officials have temporarily withheld the privilege of using it for the purpose of reloading, mixing or placing cargoes on another vessel. When this prohibition is removed, the zone is expected to attract transshipment trade that now avoids the port because of the necessity of paying duties and then claiming drawbacks. The chief advantage of the restricted area at present will be its utilization as a free storage place for goods awaiting future markets.

There is said to be considerable opposition to the project on the part of local warehouse interests and some shipping men. However, that is not surprising since the former fear diversion of cargoes that they now handle and the latter think that their handling expenses may be increased without compensating additions to the volume of business. The free zone, nevertheless, meets a long-felt need and in course of time should, as Secretary Roper hopes, lead to the "development of new transshipment re-export and consignment markets as well as an enhanced opportunity for American shipping."

A surgeon says the liquor drinking habit can be cured by a simple operation. It's just a matter of cutting out the liquor, we take it.

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Somewhat Provocative.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The infrequent letters of Mr. E. B. Henderson, of Falls Church, appear as a voice crying in the wilderness. Although I question his knowledge of economics and world affairs in general, I agree heartily with his individual campaign for justice, and if his obscure plea fails to bring about the needed reforms, if his pleas fail to influence responsible officials, at least he may have the satisfaction of knowing that a fellow citizen on the same side of the Potomac is wishing him success.

There is no section of the world, not even the remote sections of jungles inhabited by cannibals, which can produce the barbarism accepted as the usual manner of living in the South, and it is far from complimentary to the Nation to have this section of the country accepted as a standard of culture and government for the rest of the country to follow. Even the antebellum era, an era infused with the questionable virtues of cavaliers, slaves and mint juleps, had only a thin veneer of culture to offer. In the "American Note" of Charles Dickens we find able comments that are not as yet outdated. Dickens says:

"Shall we whimper over legends of the tortures practiced on each other by the pagan Indians, and smile upon the cruelties of Christian men! Rather for me, restore the forest and the Indian village; in lieu of stars and stripes, let some poor feather flutter in the breeze; replace the streets and squares by wigwams; and though the death-song of a hundred haughty warriors fill the air, it will be music to the shriek of one unhappy slave."

If the British flag flew over the South today the world would be spared the infamy of seeing sadistic bourbons torture nine innocent Negro boys for a crime which, in my opinion, they did not commit. Even Hitler refrains from public display of legal farces.

JAMES HARRISON.
Alexandria, Va., Jan. 26.

On Public Speaking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have listened to many speakers and readers on the radio. The best reader is Franklin Roosevelt, the best speaker is Gov. Smith. I have never yet met the man who could interpret a manuscript better than the President. He is well taught in the art of reading. He enunciates clearly and distinctly, emphasizes correctly, seems to know and understand the relative importance of ideas and words.

Gov. Smith on the other hand has all these qualities and more, for he speaks from the mind and heart without manuscript. He may use a colloquialism and a slang expression here and there with good effect. Knowing just what he wants to say, he says it in the most telling style.

What a pity that Senator Robinson has not taken some lessons from President Roosevelt. Perhaps the manuscript was handed to him late and he did not have time to become thoroughly acquainted with it. He mispronounced words frequently, misplaced accents, was very pronounced in his Midwesternisms, got balled up once or twice, allowed his eye to run faster than his lips. While listening to him I was reminded of former President Hoover. There was the prize reader of them all. I doubt if he ever saw the manuscript till he delivered it. He seemed to stumble over the commonest words.

All of which goes to prove that our high schools and colleges could well insist upon a course of public speaking, or if we are to get entirely away from the old-fashioned idea of speaking from the mind and heart, then a course in public reading from a manuscript which will serve to make a public man appear as though he really understood and felt the things he was reading over the radio. If a manuscript is to be published verbatim in the morning papers, then why bother with the terrible cost of broadcasting?

OLD-TIMER.

The Conditions Of Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial "The Conditions of Peace" in last Saturday's paper you spoke of having received several letters criticizing your position regarding the munitions investigation. I have not read them, but they must have been due to ignorance or distorted thinking. Your editorial was splendid, as was the one published on January 16 entitled "The Great Betrayal."

What a pity that most of our legislators haven't the mentality to think or the courage to say the same things. The whole business of "peace at any price" makes me ashamed of my country.

Please be assured that at least one—and, I am sure, many—of your readers heartily approves your attitude.

I do not sign my name because I am a Government employe.

T. E. D.
Washington, Jan. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to your editorial, "The Conditions of Peace," you base your conclusions regarding the Munitions Investigation Committee on two considerations: Firstly, the investigation has proceeded along the lines of criminal prosecution; secondly, the committee has lost its sense of proportion by leaving in the minds of the people that America will be guaranteed peace by curbing the munition maker and the large banker.

Let us consider these indictments in order. The investigation necessarily becomes involved with personalities. This procedure was absolutely imperative from the very nature of the case. The committee undertook to determine the key men involved in making profits out of war. It is quite obvious, therefore, that wealthy, powerful and influential individuals should be called to Washington to testify before this committee.

To intimate that Senator Nye and his colleagues were staging a show to gain the headlines is extremely unjust. The committee, of course, has to pound and hammer at some of the witnesses; for it really was not healthy for them to make open disclosures. Can anyone deny that there was much hedging in the testimony before the committee? The fact that the press made spectacular news out of the proceedings is no indictment of Senator Nye. He employed the best methods and procedure adaptable to the case. The problem centers in personal greed; and, therefore, personalities are closely related to the problem.

Directing our attention to the second indictment, I beg to differ with your estimate of public reaction to the activities of the munitions committee. The average person realizes that there are many causes that lead to war, and that the problem of peace is very involved. By eliminating the causes of war one by one as we determine and discover them, we are certainly on the way to real peace. In my opinion munition makers and large bankers contributed to a great extent in forcing the United States into war. Their efforts, of course, were not all of the reasons, but we do know that they played an important part. By studing their activities and becoming familiar with their methods we shall be, therefore, in a position to remove one important cause for war. Obviously the curbing of the power and influence of these groups will not guarantee America peace. The average citizen must be aware of this fact. But it certainly will be a step toward peace.

Footnote On Silicosis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The extent to which silicosis is compensated for in legislation in the United States is at once broader and more restricted than the rather hasty summary I gave of it in my recent brief note in The Post on January 18.

There should, for instance, be included the fact that the Federal compensation act, which applies to civil employes of the Government, compensates for silicosis under the general and generous provisions of the law that covers injuries and diseases contracted while at work. So also the longshoremen's and harbor workers' act of 1927 include "such occupational disease or infection as arise naturally out of such employment." West Virginia was left out of the list of States presumably granting compensation to silicosis victims. The West Virginia compensation law was amended early in 1935, specially to cover silicosis.

The States and Territories that unquestionably compensate for silicosis are very few—California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Massachusetts, North Carolina, New York, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Some other States generously included in the first white list do little more than require the reporting of the disease to their authorities or leave the question of compensation very much up in the air. Kentucky passed a law in 1934 which permitted employers in certain industries to pay compensation for injuries arising from silicosis.

The lack of remedial measures in the United States is in striking contrast to the wide prevalence of the disease. "Silicosis," said Dr. Albert E. Russell, of the United States Public Health Service, as delegate to the Silicosis Conference in Johannesburg, South Africa, "is rather widespread in the United States: it has been found to exist with a rather high incidence in a number of industries." The Public Health Service estimates that 250,000 people are afflicted out of a million who are exposed.

An enumeration of the industries without detailed subspecification includes mining, both coal and metal; quarrying, stone finishing, pottery, abrasives (sandpaper, grinding), glass, mineral earth, spray coating, refractories (silica brick), construction (railways, highways, tunnels, rock drillers in general), and certain dusty trades and occupations. But it was in mining operations that silicosis first and most extensively developed, giving it the name of "miners' phthisis."

The Episcopal Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. G. G. Moore seems to believe that there are certain Roman Catholics drawing salaries from the Episcopal Church. Perhaps Mr. Moore will enlighten us as to who these people are. Or maybe it is a mere exaggeration—a figure of speech.

Mr. Moore may be a Protestant, but the church to which he claims allegiance is Catholic—not Roman Catholic, it is true, but Catholic nevertheless. The redundant "Protestant" affixed to the name of the church at the time of the Revolutionary War was due to the activities of the Puritan element in the church at the time; and the church has, especially since the Catholic revival, strove to rid itself of this misleading word.

The so-called "high" church is not a "traitorous" element, as Mr. Moore would evidently have us believe. That word and others have been hurled at the Oxford movement for the past hundred years. It aims to bring about the revival of the full faith and worship of the Catholic Church which was stripped from it by the ruthless hand of the narrow Puritanism of the party in power at the time of the English Reformation.

Finally, Martin Luther had nothing to do with the separation of the Anglican Communion from Rome; no loyalty is therefore owed to him. The name of Wycliffe is reverenced perhaps more in the "high" church than in the extreme "Protestant" element.

The Post Impressionist

Lady In The Pulpit

Post Office, Friday.

FEMINISM, so successful on most fronts, has lost a major action in the British sector. The Church of England has decided against a proposal for the ordination of women to its priesthood.

You can read the reason if you will send 1 shilling—plus postage price—to the London offices of the Press and Publications Board of that Church's Assembly. The board will send you, in return, the "Report of the Archbishops' Commission on the Ministry of Women."

* * *

Although the proposal received small attention at the hands of the hierarchy until about 1933, it was no new thing even then. For a long, long while it had been advocated by the women of Mrs. Pankhurst's England—at least by those of them who belonged to the Established Church, or who thought their general cause would be assisted by the success of the plan.

* * *

Then, at the last Lambeth Conference of the Church, the matter suddenly loomed rather large in the discussions. So, in thoroughly British fashion, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, presiding, referred it to a specially created commission.

* * *

Under the chairmanship of the Bishop of Carlisle, that body was "to examine any theological or other relevant principles which have governed, or ought to govern, the church in the development of the ministry of women."

* * *

For the past three years, these men have been studying ancient documents and hearing modern witnesses. Their findings, now launched, pretty well commit the English Establishment.

* * *

Says the majority decision:

"The continuous tradition of the Church has been that a male priesthood, and with this tradition we believe that the general mind of the Church is still in accord . . . We do not feel able, in view of the past history and existing conditions of the Christian Church, to recommend the admission of women to the priesthood."

* * *

One lonely minority opinion, which is that of the Dean of St. Paul's, appears merely as an appended "note." It expresses the dean's conviction that "there is no theological case at all against the priesthood for women." But it adds that the time for any change in practice "has not yet come."

* * *

Deaconesses, to be sure, are another matter.

"We believe," says the majority report, "that the right solution to the whole problem of the ministry of women in the Church, in the circumstances of the present day, is to be found in the development of the status and functions of the deaconess, and in the further extension of the various opportunities open to laywomen workers . . . We think that a service for the ordination of a deaconess should be included along with the other ordination services in the ordinal."

* * *

At first glance, you might say this isn't so bad for the feminists, after all:

As a deaconess, woman will rank among the clergy.

And, since the commission adds that a deaconess should "be authorized by the bishop to officiate in consecrated buildings," we take it that she will be permitted to preach.

* * *

But there are four drawbacks.

* * *

In the first place: Women always have preached, anyhow—though, to be sure, rarely in churches.

* * *

In the second place: Some doubt exists as to whether preaching deaconesses would be liked by the listening men in Church of England congregations.

"The proposal," remarks the London Times, editorially, "is not one that will be universally welcomed."

* * *

In the third place: There is division as to whether women ever have been or ever can be first-rate preachers—in pulpits. The gallant Times of London does declare that "it may be urged that, if the innovation were disliked at first on account of its mere novelty, it would soon be justified by its results." Nevertheless, although the Post-Impressionist severely maintains an open mind upon this point, it is impossible to forget how another authority felt.

"A woman preaching," said that old Tory, Dr. Samuel Johnson, "is like a dog standing on his hind legs—you do not expect him to do it well, sir; the astonishing thing is that he can do it at all."

* * *

And in the fourth and last place: If, in the Church of England, a deaconess is a female deacon, then, while indeed ranking among the clergy, her rank is only that of its lowest order.

* * *

On the whole we fear that our feminist friends won't indorse the report of the Archbishop's Commission.

Fair Enough

After The Funeral.

London, Jan. 30.

FOLLOWING the funeral of King George there will naturally ensue a period of international political inventory, because it can hardly be doubted that the new King of England will have something to say about foreign policy. On the one hand it is always contended that the English Cabinet and not the King controls this business, but on the other hand much is being made of the new King's knowledge of geography obtained during his journeys about the world as the social ambassador and traveling drummer of the British Empire.

He has made two visits to the United States and is very well acquainted with the customs and temperament of the simple peasants of the polo and yachting set with whom he often sat down to a plain wholesome meal of caviar and champagne while studying the real American people around Syosset, L. I. He also knows Mr. Jack Curley, the wrestling promoter whose home he honored with an impromptu visit in the company of Georges Carpentier at dawn one morning, on which occasion he also honored Mr. Curley's nightshirt by tearing off a couple of hours' sleep in the same.

The King has spent some time in Canada, where he is an absentee rancher, and he has visited Africa, South America, the Orient, Australia, India, Germany and the French Riviera. It is doubtful that he knows much about Russia except by hearsay, because Russia has been socially impossible ever since the Russian revolutionaries, without provocation, rounded up a group of their ever-loving nobility and dropped them down a well, where they then dropped rocks on them.

• • • •

THIS conduct on the part of the ingrate Russian revolutionaries toward their nobility will never be adequately deplored in England, because it appears that the nobles were always thinking of the welfare of their lower classes and used to send great numbers of them away to the winter resorts of Siberia and often ordered out their troops to pet them lovingly with the knout.

He does know something of Germany, however, and there have been symptoms of a mutual crush between England and Germany for some time, which will be viewed with something akin to alarm not only by the late gallant allies in France but by all liberals and most Jews everywhere in the world.

As Prince of Wales, the new King delivered a speech some months ago in which he sounded the proposition that the Germans were not half bad people. This repudiated the vigorous old national conviction that the Germans were huns and barbarians, as taught to all Britons, including the children as well as the child-minded, not so many years ago, but, more important than that, it seemed to give aid and comfort to the Nazi regime, because the only German who is recognized as such in Germany today is the Nazi German.

Since then British war veterans have visited Germany under royal encouragement to fraternize with the Nazis, and within the last two months 10,000 Nazis were imported in a body to attend a football game between British and German teams in London. This was made an occasion for some very enthusiastic politico-sporting oratory and editorial comment, and it has been followed only recently by two alert telegrams from Adolf Hitler.

• • • •

DER FUEHRER was first to the wire with his telegrams of sympathy when King George fell ill, thereby beating the French, who usually have theirs written out in advance, to be held for release, and he was in there first again hours ahead of the runner-up with his message of condolence after the sad demise of His Majesty.

Of coures, there is no sentiment in British international politics, but the British people have been extremely emotional in this crisis, and Herr Hitler undoubtedly has someone in his office who impressed on him the sentimental advantage of getting there first with the kindest words.

France is sallow and wan and rather ill-tempered at this time, whereas Germany is robust and gaining strength by the hour, and if you bear in mind that international politicians are strictly realists in all matters you will see how friendship and understanding might ripen into love between Germany and Britain under a king who murmured the first soft words.

As for the United States, there seems to be no occasion for any change. The robust detestation of American people and customs and American ethics and culture, if any, will continue to find expression in the English press, but that is unimportant. The important things are the American Navy and American resources, and these are highly regarded and will be called for when and as needed.

2 Redfern Explorers Reported Near Death

Colon, Panama, Jan. 30 (AP).—Tom Roch and Gustav Pacht, the two explorers who set out weeks ago in an attempt to locate the long lost Paul Redfern in northern Brazil, were reported today near death from tropical diseases.

A letter here by the American Legion post said both Roch and Pacht were seriously ill in a hospital at Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana. Roch was reported to have malaria and Pacht black water fever.

Clouds Over Outer Mongolia

Growing Friction Heats Buffer Between Soviet And Manchukuo.

By Frank H. Hedges.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

"JUST as Commodore Matthew Galbraith Perry knocked at the doors of Japan 80 years ago and forced this empire to enter into the modern world, so is Japan now knocking at the closed doors of Outer Mongolia," said the official spokesman of the Foreign Office here, Eigi Amau, during a regular interview with the Japanese correspondents in Japan when being questioned as regards the cooperative activities of Japanese troops and the Manchukuo government along the illy defined Manchukuo-Mongolia border.

"Only good, and great good at that, came from Commodore Perry's visit to Japan," he went on, "and so also will great good come to Outer Mongolia.

This cleverly worded explanation to the press of Europe and America is somewhat reminiscent of the reply made by Mr. Amau's immediate predecessor, the rather fiery Toshio Shiratori, who is now Japan's Minister to Sweden, when he was asked by a foreign correspondent whether his government would recognize the independence of Manchukuo immediately after that independence had been declared a few years ago. "Why should we?" parried this foreign office spokesman, "We have no canal in Manchuria."

• • • •

FULL credit may be given to the sincerity of Japan's desires to open the doors of the dwellers on the Gobi Desert to the benefits of Western civilization, coupled with Japanese culture, but it does not lessen the danger of the situation which is developing in that region.

Clashes between armed Manchukuan and allied Japanese troops on the one hand and armed Mongol soldiers on the other, have been all too frequent during recent months to prove reassuring, while the friction between Hsinking and Urga, between Tokyo and Moscow is too great to be passed off with a shrug. Disputes and minor fracases along the Siberian-Manchukuan boundary have added to the flames, and charges and counter-charges have flown thickly among the four capitals.

With the situation in North China comparatively quiet again—that is, quiet in contrast to last June, for instance—Japan is unquestionably turning its eyes in the direction of Outer Mongolia. Soviet Russian influence and activity there are extremely disturbing to Japan. In the event of a second Russo-Japanese war, which must always be taken into reckoning by Tokyo, it is believed Japanese strategy would be threefold: To strike at Russia in the Maritime Province, northward across the Sungari River from Manchukuo, and westward from that empire along the North Manchuria-Trans-Siberian Railway Line.

Russia, it is feared here, would counter this offensive by an overland expedition through Outer Mongolia, with a supporting column from Russian Turkestan, in an attempt to take the Japanese in the rear and so isolate their offensive force.

• • • •

VIEWED in this light, the control of Outer Mongolia becomes of supreme importance to the Japanese army, as does the erection of a friendly buffer state in North China. The conference between Mongols and Manchukuans for the settlement of the Haiha incident and other border clashes, for a more precise determination of the international boundary line and for the establishment of regular channels of official communication proved abortive late last year.

The Mongols were dilatory about accepting the invitaiton to the conference, proved still more dilatory in arriving on the scene and, after their arrival, refused to accede to the wishes—or demands—of the Hsinking government and Japan's Kwantung army, the military force kept in Manchukuo by the Tokyo war office and general staff. Chief among these demands, from Tokyo's standpoint, was an exchange of official representatives with full diplomatic immunity and the right to secret and privileged communication with their home governments.

Mongolia protested that such an exchange would be derogatory to its dignity and an infringement of its independence. Manchukuo pointed out that such a situation had long existed vis a vis Outer Mongolia and Soviet Russia and that, far from being an infringement of Mongolian independence, it was an official acknowledgment thereof. (The fact that, incidentally, it would also be official Mongolian recognition of the independence of Manchukuo from Chinese rule does not seem to have been emphasized.)

• • • •

IT is a curious fact that Soviet Russia, more than a decade ago, did in Outer Mongolia very much the same thing that Japan began in Manchuria in 1931. Outer Mongolia has enjoyed a de facto independence from the Chinese government and a soviet form of government, closely allied to Moscow, for many years past, yet no such outcry was raised at this action as the independence of Manchuria evoked throughout the world. High Mongol officials are in Moscow at this very moment, giving rise to a flurry of rumors and counter rumors, of charges and counter charges in the world press.

Both Hsinking and Tokyo are firmly convinced, whether rightly or wrongly, that the hand of Moscow may be discerned behind the antagonistic attitude adopted by Urga. It is not known how far into Mongolia the Soviet intends to carry its railway branch from the Trans-Siberian across the border to Urga, which causes uneasiness in Tokyo. Moreover, Moscow plans to double track the railway branching from the Trans-Siberian line at Novo-Sibirsk and running just west of the Mongolian border to connect with the Tashkent branch north of Afghanistan. From this Novo-Sibirsk-Tashkent line four branches are to extend eastward, one into Mongolia as far as Uliasutai at least, and the remaining three to the border of Sinkiang and perhaps on into that nominally Chinese province.

Japan, apprehensive not only for Manchukuo but for itself, is exerting every effort to build a modern version of a Chinese Wall between Manchukuan and Soviet territory or territory under the influence of Moscow. That would mean, however, the occupation, or dominance over, vast stretches of land area and control of all feasible transportation routes, whether modern railways or ancient caravan trails.

• • • •

THERE can be no doubt but that Japan would prefer to dominate, rather than actually control, this great region through the erection of buffer States under Tokyo's influence. Here lies the explanation of the encouragement given by the Japanese military to the autonomous movement in North China, although Japanese business men may be actuated by different motives. Here also lies the explanation of the present activity of Prince Te and other Mongol princes and bannermen who are attempting to build up an independent nation immediately west of Manchukuo.

That Outer Mongolia must sooner or later come into intimate and official contact with Manchukuo is the conviction of Japanese officialdom. Mr. Amau points out that there are roughly five million Mongols in Eastern Asia today, of whom only about 760,000 live in Outer Mongolia. Two million are to be found in Manchukuo according to him, and 1,240,000 more are in Inner Mongolia, Suiyuan and around Kalgan, and the remaining million are in Sinkiang and Soviet territory. It is impossible, Mr. Amau and many other Japanese believe, for these Mongols to remain separated indefinitely, although they do not commit themselves to stating their willingness to bring about what appears to them as so desirable a reunion.

It is quite probable that, holding this to be an inevitable development of the future, the Tokyo Foreign Office would be quite willing to bide its time and let such a "reunion" take place naturally, but there is the war office to be reckoned with as well, and it has not yet established an international reputation for patience and forbearance. Unless disturbances at present unforseen arise south of the Great Wall, the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia border may be expected to figure in cable and radio dispatches to the world at large for some time to come.

• • • •

JAPAN, acting through Manchukuo, may take the bit in its teeth and set about the official surveying of this at present indefinite boundary, a survey which would react to the favor of Manchukuo in any doubtful question and which would be certain to prove fruitful of numerous armed clashes between the troops of Manchukuo and Mongolia. Soviet Russia could scarcely be expected to sit by idly in such an event, but would act through its protege, the Soviet State of Outer Mongolia.

Certain prophets foresee the outbreak of the long-expected second Russo-Japanese war resulting from such trouble on either the Manchukuo-Mongolia or the Manchukuo-Siberia border. Their prophecies cannot be ruled out as ridiculous, but neither can they be accepted at face value today. The only reasonable view to be taken is that serious friction and the seeds of possible warfare exists along both borders, and that developments must be closely watched as only very skillful diplomacy, restraint of the troops in the field and a spirit of mutual give and take, at present utterly absent in both Tokyo and Moscow, will prevent such an unwelcome outcome.

Ill-Starred Final

AMID boos, catcalls and hisses and here and there a faint handclap, I led my candidate to defeat last night in my first venture into politics since I succeeded in getting myself elected some years ago to the executive committee of a dog show club. I never did find out just what the score was. But I came from the tumultuous annual election of the Washington Newspaper Guild not only a sadder and wiser man, but with my mind teeming with two resolutions. One is that I will never sneer at a meeting of the D. A. R. again and the other is that I shall hereafter preserve an almost Republican respect for constitutional law.

At 11:35 last night one of the news services sent the following bulletin to New York: "Rowdy Newspaper Guild election breaks up with challenges of validity," which gives you, in a mild sort of way, a picture of what was going on in the smoke-filled room on the fifth floor of the District Building. In fact, that line is almost a masterpiece of understatement. After I briefly described the affair to a friend this morning he said: "Sounds like a meeting of the American Legion." Which also gives you an idea of what we left-wing battlers were up against.

Leaving my ivory tower and my idealism behind me, two weeks ago I went onto the hustings to battle for the right. It is a good many years since I hung around City Hall, so I had forgotten completely the tricks of the politician. My only aim was for reform and I rode into the fray on a lily white charger and with a pure heart. But I guess the boys had been talking with Mr. Farley because we left-wing radicals hadn't held our first organization meeting in a candle-lit cellar before we heard on all sides such things about our candidate as turned him into a combination of Mephistopheles, Lenin and Casanova. In other words, the heat was on.

POLITICS, I quickly learned, is no place for Galahads, and a pure heart doesn't count for 10 votes, despite Mr. Tennyson. But we of the minority went to the election hoping, as I said in my stirring nomination speech, that intellect would, ahem, triumph over passion, and that these sterling representatives of the Fourth Estate (loud cheers) would not listen to cries of "Red! Red!" (hisses, boos and one faint cheer) being hurled at the innocent head (loud laughter) of this honest, decent, courageous leader who should be forthwith elected (boos). Alas, I am no politician. I forgot his poor old mother at home and the fact that the last time he was at my house he kissed my baby and gave me a very bad cigar.

From the time I opened my mouth the place grew wilder and wilder. They voted my candidate down after the chairman had admitted that there were ringers present and had refused to allow a cohort of my candidate to make the open charge that the opposition had that very afternoon delivered a ton of coal to a copy reader with nine children who had promised to vote for my candidate, thus uring him to the side of reaction. Or perhaps it was just a pint. But, anyway, Tammany reared its ugly head and our ideals went scattering into the dust.

Finally they tore up the constitution of the Guild and one reporter, who covers the Supreme Court, was carried out laughing hysterically. Everybody demanded the floor at once and got it because the chairman didn't have a gavel, and what he needed was sledge-hammer, anyway. Somewhere in the tumultous din I heard a faint voice demanding that the election be stopped on the grounds that the method of voting was unconstitutional. Through the smoke and other fumes I traced it to the fair throat of the correspondent of The Daily Worker. Meanwhile the members of the machine, ganged up against us enlightened New Dealers, were shouting and stamping us down.

• • • •

AT midnight they carried my limp form from the batlle scene. It was only then that I learned that my candidate hadn't been there all night, which was good news because in the midst of the uproar there had been derisive demands for his presence to set forth his platform. As far as I know, he hadn't any. They took me to Childs, disheveled, dirty, tired out. And hardly had we defeate members of the minority been seated when, amid cheers, there arrived the president of the Woman's Patriotic Conference of National Defense, calm, cool and unwrinkled, all dressed in white, her nose powdered, and bearing an unsullied bunch of roses. The contrast was too much.

It was right then that I promised never to sneer again at the D. A. R. and allied organizations, which respect their by-laws and have chairmen who know the parliamentary book of rules. I had already sworn to defend any and all constitutions an hour or two before. And I added that hereafter I wouldn't back the candidacy of my best friend for dog-catcher in Silver Spring. Not if he were a newspaperman, at least.

Delegates Oppose Craft Plan, Demand Single Organization.

meeting in blind rage, insists that I dissolve that committee, all the council members will be wearing asbestos suits in hell before I do so."

This blast was greeted with tremendous applause.

The day's sessions were marked with the eagerness of the delegates to go on record for industrial unionization. Addresses made by Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins were cheered dutifully, but the business of the day to the delegates was the matter of going on record against the traditional crafts-union policy of the A. F. of L.

Challenge to Progress.

Miss Roche dwelt on the past gains of the miners, especially the Guffey-Snyder coal stabilization act, and urged the convention to "respond to the general challenge" calling for further achievements in "the wider field of citizenship." She said:

"There can be no progress unless it is the progress of all; no security unless there is general security; no enduring prosperity for any group, even if apparently secure and privileged, except as prosperity on a constantly widening and deepening base is built."

Miss Perkins delivered a telegram from President Roosevelt which expressed his regrets at inability to attend due to pressure of business, wishes for a successful meet, and gratitude for the "co-operation of the United Mine Workers."

Her address was concerned chiefly with advances in wage earnings, farm prices, purchasing power and other indices of recovery. She cited the 1935 report of the United States Steel Corporation, showing a net income of $1,084,917, compared with a net loss of $21,667,780 in 1934 as evidence that the Administration's recovery program is proving successful. She pointed out it was the first year since 1931 that the corporatoin showed a profit.

Claims 9,000,000 Put to Work.

Citing "gains since the dark days of March, 1933," the Secretary of Labor said:

"Approximately 5,000,000 men and women who were without jobs then have since returned to work in private industry. More than 4,000,000 others have found work on PWA construction projects, in CCC camps, on State road work and on WPA jobs."

The fireworks had begun before the Secretary's address, and the delegates had listened to a number of impassioned speeches on the industrial union problem and attacks on the A. F. of L. They were ready then for a vote, but Van A. Bittner, presiding, asked them to postpone voting until they had heard President Lewis' remarks after the Labor Secretary appeared.

Mass Organization Urged.

Vice President Philip Murray had outlined the past history of the industrial unions' crafts-union battle. He said:

"The only substantial safe cure for the problems of the worker, the only defense of the 39,000,000 employed and the 11,000,000 unemployed, lies in organization. The American Federation of Labor has stood adamant against mass organization. The executive council of the A. F. of L. now are lolling on the sands in Miami while a great nation is at a crisis. I say, if the A. F. of L. is unwilling to co-operate in this forward-looking plan, if they continue their carping criticism, then so far as I'm concerned as an officer of the United Mine Workers, the sooner we get the hell away from them the better!"

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer, had said:

"The A. F. of L. has heralded us as the shock troops of labor. They are willing for us to take the lead in the battles, but unwilling to accept that leadership wholly, preferring the reactionary, hidebound, obsolete tactics as exercised by the A. F. of L.'s executive council."

Assails A. F. of L. Tactics.

Then the Secretary of Labor spoke. As she left, Lewis took the platform, a platform on which no words had been minced all day—and at the top of his oratorical form, assaulted the crafts-union idea, and A. F. of L. leadership. To the steady roars of the delegates, punctuated sharply with applause and whistles, he said:

"Why not give the workers of the country the type and form of organization for which they pray? These workers, who on the picket line, fighting for their rights, will be shot, gassed, clubbed—why not give them the only armor we can have? The American Federation of Labor will not yield. It denies them the right to organize—to bargan collectively.

"There is an ancient fable of the dog in the manger who couldn't eat hay, but who used the hay as a bed rather than see the horse eat it. The American Federation is like that dog. It says you shall not pass. It has failed to organize the millions in its 55 years of history, now it denies them the right to organize.

"The A. F. of L. has been forced to recognize its own inferiority and inability to deal with great corporations and with great combinations of capital.

"I dream of a mass labor movement in this country which will establish collective bargainers on a basis of equality with corporation managers. We need a labor movement that will embrace the teeming millions."

Then, sure from applause that he had the miners' support, Lewis concluded:

"When the time comes, I'll say to the A. F. of L. and its craft unions, continuing in their reactionary Bourbon policy, just what I think you want me to call them."

The entire audience exploded in approval and voted unanimously in a rising vote to approve the paragraph authorizing Lewis and his officers to withhold the $4,000-a-month dues from the A. F. of L. "when conditions warrant," which would be tantamount to withdrawal.

39 Accused by Soviet Of Clandestine Trade

Leningrad, U. S. S. R., Jan. 30 (AP). Thirty-nine former nobles, merchants and kulaks were arrested today, accused of operating a chain of clandestine manufacturing plants operating in competition to Soviet-owned enterprises.

At that time the prisoners may also face charges of defrauding the state of taxes and bribing state officials. The frauds can be punished by death on the ground that they are offenses against the state.

Shah Baronian Strums 'Banjo' With 13 Strings

Entertainer at Samovar Uses Odd Instrument to Amuse Patrons.

By Chanticleer.

Dropping into the Samovar the other evening I expected to find a pair of decidedly American entertainers amusing the patrons. Instead, there was Shah Baronian, playing the most intriguing instrument I have ever laid eyes on. Shah, on first sight, doesn't appear to be much in the way of 1936 American entertainment, even in as distinctly a Caucasian spot as the Samovar.

But if you give him two minutes of your undivided time, you'll stay as long as I did. The instrument he uses is a sort of combination banjo and ukelele—only entirely different, if you follow me. It originally was made with eight strings, but Baronian improved on that. It now has 13.

Furthermore, it is held close under the chin, its long handle extending far out to the left. Vibrant tones are obtained by shaking it after the strings have been plucked. Maybe you've heard Eddy Peabody and other expert banjo players get a lot of music out of an old-fashioned Southern banjo. But Baronian makes his "thar" sound like a symphony of strings.

The origin of the thar, so you will know before you see it, goes back 1,600 years. Baronian has entertained the Shah of Persia on his instrument. And in case you're interested, the dark-eyed accompanist is Genia, Baronian's wife. To top it all off, Artem, the Samovar's Caucasian head waiter, plays on an oversize tamborine, which really is a drum—and in several tones.

Leah Lewis and Jack Kinney are featuring a waltz and Continental Tango at Pete Macias' Club Heigh-Ho, the latter involving several veree, veree difficult lifts. Kinney, incidentally, attended Notre Dame and was a great friend of the late Knute Rockne, and was a member of the American air forces during the war. Who says a dancer is a sissy? . . Manager Frank McNey has good news for the patrons of the Ambassador's Hi Hat—21 price reductions on the new suggestion card. It will be distributed to the guests within the next day or so. According to McNey, there's a constantly growing demand for fancy drinks—interestingly enough attributed to the sterner sex. He ought to know. He's been serving the public's cocktail tastes for 25 years . . . Milt Barrett, host at the Dude Ranch, says we softies here in the city don't know the rigors of suburban Washington. It was 12 below one night out at the Ranch, and many persons trekked out just for the beauty of the snowy scene, and to cavort about on plenty of crunchy snow. Of course, they all sampled the concoctions of Jack, the barmaster, afterward . . . it's more than "movie night" at the Shoreham tonight. The National Search for Talent tour (Universal) will make actual screen tests from 300 applicants—narrowed down to 30. Winners have a chance for California and a contract. Last weeks' pictures will be shown tonight, and more crowd pictures will be made as usual.

Appearing on the Night Club Floors This Week

Included in the talent gracing the floors of the Capitol's night clubs this week are, top row: Virginia Sims, songstress, Maryland Club Gardens; the cameraman who will take the "Talent Search" movies at the Shoreham tonight, and Gerson Kauffman, the Madrillon's "one-man band." Bottom row—Stanisloff and Lydia, dancing at the Club Volga Boatman; Paradise Islanders, at the Hi-Hat, and Syd and Buddy Rose, tap specialists, at the La Paree.

'Thar' Feature at the Samovar; Mayflower Draws Celebrities

Shah Baronian Performs on Ancient Oriental Instrument.

Every month sees the Mayflower growing more expansive and prouder of the celebrities attracted. The other evening a casual check revealed the following enjoying themselves to Sidney's music: Kitty Carlisle and Katherine DeMille, of the films; Stuart MacDonald, Mrs. Forbes Morgan, Robert Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kremer, Commissioner and Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. Campbell Prichett and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Frame.

And they're pretty proud of Sidney's orchestra, too. That's Leader Buddy Harmon, there at the drums. Harold Veo is the violinist—in front, and Sid Cowan is the bass player who is developing a reputation for multi-lingual singing.

Once it was said the Sidney unit in the lounge was versatile. Now it is generally understood that a band just naturally has to be versatile to play all the requests it receives—comedy take-offs, Viennese waltzes, authentic rhumbas, and then something hot from Harlem.

And there's Harriet, who has been called the "Grover Whalen of Washington," who probably knows a greater variety of prominent folks than anyone else in town. Financiers, diplomats, politicians, society leaders—they all know her by name. Ask Harriet to show you her autograph book the next time you pay the lounge a late afternoon visit.

Rounding out the list of items that makes the Mayflower bosom rise with pride, there is Teddy, who does the head-waitering, and Chef de Cuisine Marchitelli, responsible for the menus.

Topping it all off with a delightfully comfortable atmosphere, it's the Mayflower.

• • • •

Jerson Kaufman is known as the "one man band," and he's open to any sporting proposition. But the other night the boys in the band really tested him. Jerson, in case you don't get around, is performing at Peter Borras' Madrillon. To go on, it grew out of the "Round and Round" insanity. To show he really knew his instruments, Jerson did the piece to the satisfaction of everyone present on all the fiddles, saxophones and trumpets in the house, winding up by playing two saxophones at once . . . The Three Argonauts and Syd and Buddy Rose have been held over for another week at the La Paree, beginning today. And don't forget that tonight is "College Night," with all the boys and girls from the seminaries making their own brand of whoopee. And alas, and alack, Ray Beck's smiling face no longer is in the bandstand . . . Ralph Smith, Club Habana's headwaiter, has just returned from an out-of-town visit, and almost regrets it. All Host Guy Scott's patrons have been wringing the Smith hand, glad to see him back and all that sort of thing. But, gosh! Ain't it nice to know you're missed! . . . Sasha Bartnovsky, the Russian Troika's maestro, knows most of the celebrities' favorite numbers. For example, when Senator Tom Connolly drops in, Sasha knows the Senator will want to hear "The Last Round-Up." Senator Meakin, however, doesn't go in for those Western wide-open-spaces tunes. Senator Capper prefers the Troika's borsch to all of Sasha's music, however.

Fall Injuries Fatal To Treasury Clerk

Miss Bonnil Basden, 42-year-old Treasury Department clerk, died in Sibley Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered shortly before midnight Wednesday, when she fell down a flight of steps while visiting a friend.

Miss Basden was accompanied at the time by Mrs. Hilda Leafe, 3234 F street southeast. The two had just arrived at the home of Mrs. Ray C. Baade, 1806 Branch avenue southeast, when Miss Baden lost her balance and fell to the basement.

At first it was believed she was uninjured. Later she became ill and was taken to the hospital. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was caused by a fractured skull.

12 Ordered Acquitted In Drake Fraud Trial

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—Directed verdicts of acquittal were ordered today by Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan for 12 of the 20 remaining defendants in the Sir Francis Drake mail-fraud trial.

When the court convenes tomorrow there will be only eight of the original 42 defendants on trial. The jury, which has listened to the strange story of Sir Francis Drake's supposed billions since November 18, was expected to retire tomorrow, after hearing final arguments.

Test to Be Held For Postmaster At Hyattsville

Civil Service to Close Application Lists on February 18.

A competitive examination for the postmastership at Hyattsville was announced yesterday by the United States Civil Service Commission, at the request of the Postmaster General.

Applications must be filed with the commission on or before February 18. They may be obtained from the secretary of the board of civil service examiners at the Hyattsville postoffice or from the Civil Service Commission in Washington.

Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated upon their education, training, business experience and fitness. Applications are to be filed on Form 10, while Form 2213 gives information regarding the examination.

The term of Miss Mary T. Wise, postmaster at Hyattsville for more than 20 years, will expire shortly. There are known to be a number of candidates for the post, which rates as a second-class office.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County will give a testimonial dinner to Brice Bowie, clerk of the county circuit court February 26, at a place to be decided. Bowie is sponsor of the organization.

Mrs. A. H. Seidenspinner, of Riverdale, county chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund, has announced that contributions still are being received by the committee. Donations obtained to date total $242, she stated.

Arrangements have been completed for the card party to be held Friday at 8 p. m. in the Hyattsville Elementary School on Olive street, the proceeds of which will go toward equipping the new auditorium.

The committee of grade mothers in charge is composed of Mrs. Arthur L. Stack, chairman; Mrs. David C. Buscall, jr., and Mrs. J. H. Beckenbaugh. There will be door and other prizes, with refreshments.

A new telephone exchange at Clinton, Md., will be the objective of the Southern Prince Georges County Citizens Association if the organization votes affirmatively on the findings of its special telephone service committee.

The committee, appointed more than a month ago to investigate alleged inadequacies of telephone service in the lower section of the county, has declared that the Upper Marlboro exchange cannot do the work necessary for this rapidly growing community. Means of obtaining lower rates are also being studied.

Another special committee, appointed by the association to look into the feasibility of a new bus service on the Southern Maryland pike, has undertaken to collect data on the number of persons in need of the service.

Action as to alleged excessive electric rates in certain sections has been delayed by the association until further information can be had regarding the two companies operating in the vicinity.

For the first time in the history of the University of Maryland, sisters will lead the Junior Prom, to be held tonight in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The sisters will be Misses Fredericka and Flora Waldman, of 2730 Chesapeake street northwest.

And, for the first time in the university's history, a member of the freshman class will be one of the leaders. Miss Fredericka Waldman, the freshman, was selected for the honor, by Colman Headley, of College Park, president of the junior class.

Miss Flora Waldman will be escorted by Robert Hammerlund, 4414 Illinois avenue northwest, chairman of the prom committee.

Among the patrons and patronesses for the affair are Gov. and Mrs. Harry Nice, Senator and Mrs. George L. Radcliffe, Representative and Mrs. William P. Cole, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holzapfel and H. C. Byrd, acting president of the university.

Annapolis Seeks Gas Rate Slash

Baltimore, Jan. 30 (AP).—The State Public Service Commission announced today it is studying the affairs of the Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore with a view toward securing reductions in rates.

The announcement was made in a letter to officials of Annapolis who had written that they had conferred with gas company officials asking lower rates, but had been unable to secure them. The letters were from Mayor Louis N. Phipps and R. Everett Beavin, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Annapolis Civitan Club.

Reductions in rates of four companies have been announced by the commission recently.

Cold Hurts Peaches.

Hancock, Md., Jan. 30.—Fears of peach growers of this section that five days of sub-zero weather damaged their crops, have been confirmed. A number of growers here reported heavy killing of buds after a check yesterday, the first day the mercury has been above the zero mark. The mercury dropped to 10 below here on two mornings last week. Entire blocks of buds were found to have been frozen.

Front Foot Benefit Assessments Are Extended in Montgomery

$200,000 Involved in Tax Ruling; Mt. Olivet Cemetery Decision Upheld; 6 Schools Get Accredited Ratings; 9 Fox Hunts Scheduled.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Sligo 1363.

Extension of the time for collection of the first installment of front-foot benefit assessments in the suburban area of Montgomery County was ordered yesterday by the county commissioners.

Approximately $200,000 is involved in the tax ruling.

Taxpayers of the suburban area petitioned the commissioners to extend the time on the assessments. Their plea was based on a resolution adopted by the former board of county commissioners, December 28, 1933, which extended collection of these assessments for the years 1934 and 1935, and on a subsequent meeting of the commissioners in January, 1934, of which no record could be found in the minutes of the board.

Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, who was a member of the board at that time, remembered the meeting and said that a resolution was adopted at that time explaining more fully the resolution of December, 1933.

No Additional Levies.

County Auditor Alexander K. Hancock reported there is sufficient money in the assessment account to pay the interest for this year on the bonds issued by the county to provide funds for this work, so that no additional money will be required to be levied.

The commissioners adopted a resolution confirming the resolution of December, 1933, and directing the county treasurer not to advertise for sale any properties delinquent on this account this year. The accounts will be computed as of July 1, 1936, and divided into ten equal annual installments, the first of which becomes due and payable July 1, 1936. Unless this installment is paid on or before January 1, 1937, the entire account then becomes due and payable and subject to sale at the April, 1937, tax sale in accordance with the usual legal requirements.

No Evidence for Reversal.

The commissioners ruled that counsel for the new Mount Olivet Cemetery Co. had not presented any evidence which would cause them to reverse the decision of a former board which refused to grant a permit for establishment of a cemetery on the Seventh street pike near Aspen, Md.

Mandamus proceedings are pending in Montgomery County Circuit Court in which the cemetery promoters are seeking to have the commissioners directed to grant the permit.

Mrs. Antoinette Schumaker, 84, received the award for the oldest mother present at the mothers and daughters banquet held at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church hall under the auspices of the women's society. Four generations of Mrs. Schumaker's family attended.

Others who received awards were Mrs. Preston Longley, youngest mother; Mrs. Fred J. Stevenson, who had the greatest number of daughters and the youngest daughter present. There were four groups of three generations present.

The affair was attended by 350 women. Mrs. E. V. Crittendon presided. Toasts were given by Mrs. R. A. Ramsay and Miss Catherine Matoon.

Dr. E. C. A. Rubey, of Newark, N. J., State manager, will address a meeting of the Laytonsville Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, tonight in honor of 19 members of the camp for 25 years or more.

J. Ernest Hawkins, consul, will be master of ceremonies, with District Manager H. H. Millard, of Washington, in charge of the degree team. Taylorsville Camp, from Baltimore County, is expected to bring candidates for adoption. Talbot Camp, of Washington, will fill the officers' stations for the adoption ceremony, and the Forester team, of Washington Camp, of Washington, will drill.

Six Montgomery County schools have been given accredited ratings for college entrance requirements by the Commission on Secondary Schools of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, Dr. E. D. Grizzell, chairman of the commission, announced this week. The local list includes Georgetown Preparatory School, at Garrett Park, a private school, and five public high schools. The public schools are Gaithersburg, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Montgomery High School, at Rockville; Sherwood High School at Sandy Spring, and Montgomery Blair High School at Silver Spring.

The board of directors of the Rockville Cemetery Association has announced its intention of developing an additional tract of 18 acres in its cemetery on the Norbeck road, near Rockville.

Work is expected to start in the spring under the supervision of Robert B. Cridland, landscape architect of Philadelphia, and M. G. Copelin, of Washington. The present board of directors consists of William F. Prettyman, president; Clifford H. Robertson, secretary-treasurer; George P. Henderson, Albert M. Boule, F. Bache Abert, F. Barnard Welsh and Dr. Robert C. Warfield, all of Rockville.

A dance will be held at the Takoma Park firehouse tomorrow night for the benefit of the Junior Squadron of the Takoma Park American Legion Post. Proceeds will be used to purchase new uniforms and equipment for the drum and bugle corps.

The committee on arrangements consists of E. Brooke Fetty, George B. Kissinger, F. M. Stuart, Earl Thomas and Joseph Bateman, of the legion post, and Mrs. Mildred Burr, Mrs. Fetty, Mrs. Leo Cavanaugh, Mrs. Gladys Harrison and Mrs. Donald D. Lamond, of the Women's Auxiliary.

Fairfax Grange Asks Stringent Traffic Laws

Seeks Drastic Punishment for Reckless, Drunken Auto Driving.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 145, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The Pomona Grange of Fairfax County, Va., has adopted a resolution asking the State Assembly to enact more stringent traffic laws and impose more severe punishment for careless or drunken driving.

The county grange also requested that all dance halls be required to close at midnight Saturday and that the sale of liquor be forbidden after midnight Saturday and on Sunday. The proposition that members of boards of supervisors be elected from the county at large rather than by districts, as suggested in the plan for reorganization of county government, was defeated at the meeting Tuesday night at Oakton, as was a motion to have the grange sponsor a change in the term of office of county clerk from eight to four years.

George F. Miles, of Providence Grange, was installed as the new master of the Fairfax County Pomona Grange for two years. Joseph Cox, of Woodlawn, was installed as overseer. Other officers who were installed by former Master Hatcher H. Ankers, of Pioneer Grange, were Maurice Fox, of Navy, lecturer; Oswald Casper, of Great Falls, steward; Holcomb Rogers, of Floris, assistant steward; Henry Hawxhurst, of Oakton, chaplain; Miss Edith Rogers, of Floris, secretary; Julian Salde, of Masonville, treasurer; George Gillingham, of Woodlawn, gatekeeper; Mrs. J. Marvin Sanders, of Colvin Run, Pomona; Mrs. M. K. Stroud, of Floris, Flora; Mrs. H. N. Ankers, of Vienna, Ceres; Miss Elizabeth Guilford, of Great Falls, lady assistant steward, and Miss Annie Cornwell, of Forestville, organist.

The Herndon High School boys and girls basketball team, will play Lincoln High School in the Lincoln School gymnasium on Saturday at 7:45 p. m.

The Herndon town council, at a special meeting held in the Herndon High School for an inspection of the buildings, passed a resolution endorsing the Parent-Teacher Association request to the county school board for repairs and additions to the school. Additional teachers, two new rooms and basement with additional toilet facilities were asked.

For the last three years warnings from the State education department have been received concerning the overcrowded condition for an accredited high school. Other improvements asked include an adequate heating system in the home economics cottage and commercial building and covering the pipes in the main school with asbestos.

State and County Game Warden Arthur W. Ellis, of Fairfax County, has issued a plea to everyone to feed the birds and other wild life. He declares that because of the snow and ice the natural food is inaccessible, and thousands of wild fowl and game die of starvation rather than from the cold. He said that it has been proven that summer birds could live through the winter in this climate if they could obtain enough food to maintain their body heat.

Mrs. Holden S. Harrison, secretary of hie Fairfax County Sunday School Association, announces that the next session of the Fairfax County Sunday School Institute will be held February 6 at 2:30 p. m. in Herndon Congregational Church; on the same date at 7:30 p. m. at Oakton and February 7 at 7:30 p. m., at Falls Church.

The Rev. Minor C. Miller, State secretary, will conduct the meetings. Teachers of all Sunday schools are invited to attend the meetings.

Funeral services were held yesterday in Lewinsville Presbyterian Church at McLean, Va., for Mrs. Lorin O. Magarity, who died early Tuesday morning in Garfield Hospital. Interment followed in Lewinsville Cemetery. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Mrs. William Chase, of Washington. Mrs. Magarity was a past matron of Sharon Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. She served for a number of years as an officer of the Northern Virginia Association of Past Matrons and Patrons of the Eastern Star.

Motorist Gets Fine of $500 In Alexandria

Drunken Driving Charge Also Brings Sentence of 30 Days in Jail.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Judge James Reece Duncan, in police court yesterday, assessed a $500 fine and 30 days in jail against Robert Milton Foote, 24, Woodbridge, Va., on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. Foote, through his attorney, H. Noel Garner, noted an appeal to corporation court.

Foote allegedly was the driver of an automobile which collided with one driven by A. Howell Thomas, 1515 Princess street, injuring Thomas and his 1-year-old son, Fitzhugh Thomas. This charge will not be heard until Thomas and his son are able to leave Alexandria Hospital to testify.

Leon Wallace, 42, was charged with driving a car while under the influence of liquor, colliding and leaving the scene of the accident. He was fined $100, with 30 days in jail, on the first charge; $25 and $4.25 costs on the second, and $25 and $3 costs on the third charge.

It was claimed Wallace's car collided with one driven by Harry R. Waples, 12 Caton avenue, on the night of January 21. Wallace denied the charge of driving while under the influence of liquor, and announced he would note an appeal.

Approximately 800 persons last night attended the President's Birthday Ball in the armory. Harry F. Kennedy was general chairman, assisted by J. Herbert Taylor. Seventy per cent of the net proceeds will be used in local infantile paralysis work, the remaining 30 per cent to go to the Warm Springs Foundation. The fund raised is administered by J. Herbert Taylor, O. Ashby Reardon and Harry F. Kennedy.

A telegram of greetings, signed by citizens of Alexandria, was sent to President Roosevelt by Clark Hungerford, of the local committee.

Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revenue, has issued a statement that the extension of city licenses until February 15 does not affect State licenses. The deadline for obtaining State licenses is today. A penalty of 10 per cent will be added after that time.

Miss Margaret W. Spencer, 106 Virginia avenue, Jefferson Park, who was burned at her home Wednesday, was reported yesterday as being in a serious condition at Alexandria Hospital. Miss Spencer was waxing a floor and went into the kitchen near an electric stove, and it is supposed wax on her clothing became overheated.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, with headquarters at Gadsby's Tavern, and Russell Mitchell Post, No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, with headquarters at Eagles Hall, 1000 block King street, are prepared to assist any World War veteran in filling out his application for the bonus. This service is without obligation to join either organization.

Police Capt. John S. Arnold, a World War veteran, has announced that the fingerprint equipment at police headquarters is at the disposal of veterans in this work.

The current of the Virginia Public Service Co. from Braddock to South Washington was off yesterday from 12:55 to 1:45 p. m., due to wire trouble.

Bids for improvement of Russell road from King street to Mount Vernon avenue, opened in the office of City Manager E. C. Dunn, in the presence of Col. J. A. Anderson, of Richmond, acting director of the PWA in Virginia, disclosed the bid of McGuire & Rolfe, of Washington, was the lowest. Their bid was $66,000.65. It is expected this firm will be awarded the contract as soon as it is approved by the PWA in Richmond.

Other bids submitted were as follows: Northern Virginia Construction Co., Alexandria, $70,369; W. H. Armstrong & Co., Washington, D. C., $71,925.45; Wilmoth Paving Co., Washington, D. C., $74,689.35; Roberts Paving Co., of Salisbury, Md., $73,002; Union Paving Co., Washington, D. C., $73,943.50.

Fred Pullman, jr., of Fire Company No. 1, received an injured ankle while responding to an alarm at the Alexandria Iron Works, Royal and Wilkes streets, shortly after midnight yesterday. He was treated at the Alexandria Hospital. The fire was at a work bench. Damage was slight.

The Alexandria school board has announced that March 18 has been selected as the date for dedicatory exercises for the new George Washington High School.

Dan S. Hollenga, who resigned as business manager for the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce last September 1, has accepted the posion of business manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Asbury Park, N. J., it was announced yesterday.

Hollenga served as business manager of the local trade group for five years, coming to Alexandria from Petersburg, Va., where he held a similar position.

Man, 75, Injured Seriously by Truck

Frank J. Downey, 75, of Sandy Spring, Md., was struck by a truck operated by James M. Gartner, jr., and seriously injured late yesterday afternoon on the old Baltimore road, near Sandy Spring.

Downey, who is the father-in-law of Mrs. Clara May Downey, proprietress of the Olney Inn, was taken to the Montgomery County Hospital, where he is suffering from head injuries and a crushed chest.

Gartner, who told police he skidded on a patch of ice, was released after further questioning.

William T. Badger, Fort Myer private, is held under $1,000 bond by Montgomery County police on charges of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants, following an accident early yesterday morning.

Badger, according to police, was driving without lights on the wrong side of Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, when he knocked down Roy Dick, 27, of 7420 Georgia avenue northwest.

Dick was taken to the Washington Sanatorium and Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg, by J. P. Wilson, jr., of Silver Spring, who witnessed the accident. Badger was arrested by Corpl. Oscar Gaither and Private James Shoemaker.

Aid Chiefs to Buy Apples in Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 30.—J. A. Brooke, director of the procurement division of the Virginia emergency relief administration, and Alva C. Richards, of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, Washington, arrived here today to purchase 240 carloads of Virginia apples.

The apples are destined for families on relief rolls and the purchase will in no wise compete with the regular markets, it was said.

Of the total quantity to be purchased, about 43 carloads will be distributed to Virginia families, and the others to clients in Southern States.

The purchases will be apportioned to companies in Winchester, Berryville, Martinsburg and other cities in the Shenandoah Valley fruit belt.

ICC Authorizes Waiver Of Potato Hauling Rule

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized the Norfolk Southern Railway to establish rates on shipments of potatoes from North Carolina origins to Northern destinations without observing the long and short haul clause.

Except when modified by the commission, this clause of the interstate commerce act prevents carriers from charging a lower rate for a long haul than for a shorter haul on the same route.

Teacher Appointed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30.—Miss Margaret Durst, for the past four years teacher of English in the Keyser Junior High School, Keyser, W. Va., has been named English teacher in Allegany High School, succeeding the former Miss Miriam Klawan. Miss Mary Nethken, of Elk Garden, graduate of West Virginia University, succeeds Miss Durst at Keyser.

Arlington Zone Board Declines ToBanBuilding

Turns Down Petition Seeking to Halt $4,000,000 Apartment House.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

By a unanimous vote, the zoning appeal board yesterday denied the application to eliminate or amend a section of the zoning ordinance which permits erection of apartment houses within residential sections.

This action was sought by citizens in the vicinity of Aurora Hills, Oakcrest and Arlington Ridge to stop the construction of the proposed $4,000,000 apartment by Henry C. Morris, developer of Aurora Hills.

Final action will be taken by the county board at a meeting to be held the night of February 14, at which time the action of the zoning appeal board will be presented to them by County Manager Roy S. Braden.

The county board, at its meeting yesterday, appointed the following persons to constitute the Arlington County Public Utilities Commission: John Connor, of Ballston; J. B. Lowell, of Arlington; Albert M. Jones, of Virginia Highlands; Paul Schaub, of Thrifton Village, and James E. Chinn, of Lyon Village.

The board, after considering the offer of Mrs. Thomas S. Wallis, of a tract of land located in Cherrydale for a public park, library site and playground, referred the matter to the county manager for a report on cost of maintenance. Action will be taken at the February meeting.

Today is the dead-line for obtaining State revenue licenses from the office of Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green, for merchants, contractors, real estate operators, lawyers, dentists and other business enterprises.

Failure to secure the required license will result in a penalty of 10 per cent with a minimum of $2.

Commissioner Green stated that in accordance with the provisions of the law he is required to report all firms and corporations failing to obtain their license, to the Commonwealth's attorney for prosecution.

Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board, will be the principal speaker at the February graduating exercises at the Washington-Lee High School, to be held in the school auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock.

The exercise will open with the invocation by the Rev. Walter Wolf, pastor of the Arlington Presbyterian Church, followed by an address of welcome by John M. Stewart, chairman of the county school board.

The diplomas to the class numbering 13 will be presented by Fletcher Kemp, county school superintendent.

Taxpayers to Be Warned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30.—In order that Washington County may avoid borrowing money to meet current expenses, County Treasurer Harry E. Keedy next week will warn 5,000 delinquent taxpayers that action may be taken against them. The county treasurer is authorized to sell property for delinquent taxes. Notices are being prepared by a corps of clerks and will be sent out within a few days.

5 P.M. is a test of how you FEEL
"How do I feel.... Rotten! why do you ask?"

"Because, you are not yourself!"
IT is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up these oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life... food is really turned into energy and strength... you can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood-cells... it also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years... and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too. Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red cellophane-wrapped package. The big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment... it's more economical.

Roosevelts' Intimates At Birthday Dinner

21 Candles Only Burn on Festive Board Marking Executive's Fifty-fourth Anniversary; First Lady Later Attends Six Balls Here.

By Francesca McKenney.

A cake with 21 candles flickered gayly on the table in the state dining room of the Whate House last evening when President and Mrs. Roosevelt had a group of intimate friends dining with them in celebration of the President's fifty-fourth birthday.

In the Roosevelt household, no one ever celebrates a birthday with more than 21 candles, which is a charming custom, for one doesn't realize that the years are quickly sliding by.

The guests were Mr. Thomas Lynch and Mr. Stanley Prenosil, of New York; Mr. James Sullivan, of Boston; Mr. Kirke Simpson, of Washington; Mr. Stephen Early and Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre, secretaries to the President; Miss Marion Dickerman and Miss Nancy Cook, of New York; Miss Marguerite Lehand and Miss Grace Tully, personal secretaries to the President, and Miss Margaret Durand, secretary to Col. Louis McHenry Howe, all of whom were intimate friends of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt during the days when the former was Assistant Secretary of the Navy and later when he was Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1920.

This group has gathered annually since then on the President's birthday to laugh at stories about each other and to chat about the past and present.

First Lady Attends Balls.

The First Lady wore for the occasion a gown of cream-colored brocade made on simple lines with a short train and a rare lace fischu about the neckline. Later in the evening, she donned a white evening wrap trimmed with a large collar of white fur, when she left the Executive Mansion, accompanied by Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider, Mrs. James Helm, Miss Cook, Miss Dickerman and Miss Lehand, to attend the six President's birthday balls given at Washington hotels last evening.

On Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a luncheon in the White House in honor of the ladies of the Cabinet, and in the afternoon she will entertain at a tea from 4 until 5 o'clock. Later that evening, the First Lady will spend a short time at the carnival to be given on Monday night by the Knights of Columbus for the benefit of the Catholic Charities of the District of Columbia.

Garners to Entertain.

Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at luncheon again on Tuesday in the Executive Mansion, and that evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guests in whose honor the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner will entertain at dinner at the Washington Hotel.

Mrs. Duffy, wife of Senator F. Ryan Duffy, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of her guests, Mrs. Marguerite Caldwell, of Milwaukee, and Mrs. Louis J. Fellenz, of Fon du Lac, who are spending several days in the Capital en route to their homes after a visit in Bermuda.

Commissioner George E. Allen entertained at dinner last evening, later attending the President's birthday ball. Among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Pollio.

Mr. Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, and Mrs. Hazen were hosts at a supper party at the Shoreham last evening for the President's birthday ball. Their guests were Dr. and Mrs. Lynn Colvin, Dr. and Mrs. E. Milburn Colvin, Dr. and Mrs. Melvin Hazen Colvin and Mrs. Harry H. Vickers.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney entertained at dinner last evening in their apartment at Wardman Park Hotel, when covers were laid for ten. Mr. and Mrs. McKenney later took their guests to the President's birthday ball.

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim entertained at dinner last evening in their home on Woodland drive. They will entertain at a buffet supper on Sunday evening.

Mrs. William D. West entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last night for a group of the ladies attending the Woman's Patriotic Conference on National Defense. The party adjourned to Mrs. West's apartment after the dinner.

The guests were Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant, Mrs. Grace Brosseau, of New York; Mrs. William Sherman Walker, of Seattle, Wash.; Mrs. Harriet V. Rigdon, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. Edward L. Moulton and Miss Sue Handley, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. John Beavers, Mrs. George M. Grimes, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. W. C. Abbott, of Concord, N. H., and Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel.

Alexandria Fete Set February 8

Washington Society Members to Attend Garden Club's 'Leap Year Fiesta.'

Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Andrew Jackson Montague, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mme. Lombard and Mrs. John S. Barbour are among those who will attend the "Leap Year Fiesta" to be presented under the auspices of the Alexandria Garden Club on February 8 in the George Washington High School auditorium, Alexandria.

The Alexandria Garden Club last year took charge of the planting and landscaping around the new Alexandria Hospital Annex and has a plan of civic planting for the coming year. To raise funds for this program the club is sponsoring the annual musical revue, written and staged by Mary Cabell Callaway.

More than 200 persons, many of them members of the club, will take part in the production. A scene from "The Gay '90's" will be given, with many prominent Alexandrians taking part, several in authentic costumes.

Ramsay-Hurley Nuptials Are Held

Marriage Is Solemnized at Sacred Heart.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Hurley, Clinton, Iowa, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Marie Hurley, of Washington, to Mr. David Ramsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsay, Chicago, Ill.

The wedding took place in the sacristy of Sacred Heart Church Friday, January 24, at 10 a. m. The bride wore a tailored suit of lilac with yellow accessories. Her corsage was of yellow tea roses. Miss Dorothy Schutz and Mr. James Cowan, of Washington, attended the couple. Miss Schutz was attired in a tailored suit of dusty pink with brown accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was given at the Mayflower by Miss Schutz for the bridal party.

The young couple will make their home in Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost Given Tea Service

Antique Pieces in Set Are Presented by Friends.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost was the recipient yesterday of a silver tea service, given by a large group of friends who have been associated with her for many years in various educational and political activities.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Charlottesville, Va., at 12:30 o'clock, at the Dodge Hotel.

Rare antique pieces make up the tea set. Three pieces are early American made of coin silver. The tray and kettle are very old Sheffield.

Large Piedmont Estate Bought By Col. Johnson

'Malbone' Is Classic Colonial Home; Authenticity to Be Keynote.

Col. and Mrs. John Otto Johnson, whose house in Forest Hills has been leased for some time to Senator Dickenson, have recently purchased a 150-acre estate in the Piedmont section of Virginia, between Orange Courthouse and Charlottesville.

Mrs. Johnson is renaming the estate Malbone, since the classic Colonial style of the house is reminiscent of an ancestral home owned by "the lordly Malbone's," which was burned during the Revolution.

The house is being done over by the former owner, Mrs. Albert Edholm, who now lives at Windsor, one of the historic old places outside of Charlottesville. She has searched that part of Virginia for authentic features, such as the 150-year-old doorway, the mahogany staircase, the Corinthian columns of the portico, which came from a now demolished colonial mansion in Richmond.

Mrs. Johnson, who is an enthusiastic gardener, has been busy planting a formal box-edged rose garden, designed for her by Mrs. Lillian Wright Smith, garden consultant.

Malbone will be ready for Col. and Mrs. Johnson's occupancy early this spring.

Vermont Alumni Dinner.

The Washington Alumni of the University of Vermont will hold an informal dinner at Tilden Gardens, corner of Connecticut avenue and Tilden street northwest, this evening at 6:30 o'clock. The dinner will be followed by singing of Vermont songs and bridge. This is one of a series of gatherings of the Vermont Alumni in Washington during this season. Mrs. L. J. Peet is in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, visits Oakington, his old school, to help solve the mystery surrounding the deaths of Robert Marshall and his older brother, Wilbraham. Robert's skull was pierced by a falling gas fixture. Wilbraham was found dead at the bottom of the empty swimming tank, and a bullet was found in his brain. Robert Roseveare, headmaster of the school, suggests that Wilbraham's death may have been suicidal, and then made to appear accidental by someone wishing to save the feelings of the family and school. But Revell and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detective, do not accept this theory. They suspect Ellington, count of the boys, and heir to their fortune. They are interested, too, in the fact that Ellington and Roseveare had been associated formerly in New Zealand. They also keep an eye on Lambourne, another one of the school masters.

Chapter XVII

REVELL, AT THE APPOINTED TIME, was turning the handle of Ellington's door. Guthrie was there reading a newspaper by the window and gave him a nod and a signal to be quiet. Following the detective's instructions Revell settled himself in the small adjoining apartment which had at one time been the bedroom of an unmarried master. There were cracks here and there in the matchboard partition, and he arranged his chair so that he could see a good deal of what went on in the main room.

Revell waited, and after a few moments heard the school bell ringing for the end of afternoon school. A few seconds later came the sound of heavy footsteps ascending the stairs and marching along the corridor; then the door was suddenly flung open and Ellington, in cap and gown, and with books under his arm, strode into the room.

"Good evening, Mr. Ellington," said Guthrie instantly.

Ellington stopped sharply as he heard his name spoken. "Hullo!" he barked, seeing the trespasser. Then he added: "I don't think I know you. What the devil are you doing in my room, anyway?"

"Oh, merely waiting to have a little chat with you, Mr. Ellington."

"Chat be damned! What I want to know is what right you have to be here! I suppose you're the detective that's been prowling about here lately?"

"Yes, you've guessed it."

Ellington raised his eyes to the ceiling as if in mute protest to the powers above. "All I can say," he retorted at length, "is that if I were head I wouldn't put up with you interfering with the whole routine of the school in this infernal way! It's scandalous, and I've told the head so! There seems to be a conspiracy on the part of officialdom to ruin the school altogether!"

Guthrie's voice was serious. "Look here, Mr. Ellington, I'm only the servant of authority—I have to do these things. There's been a murder committed—it's my job to investigate it. Don't you see?"

Ellington Is Annoyed.

"I don't see, because in the first place I don't agree that there has been a murder committed," retorted Ellington, but his manner was certainly a shade less truculent. He went on: "Ever since Robert's accident last year there's been a positive epidemic of unpleasant rumors going about the school. No proof, no evidence—merely suspicion, insinuation and scandal. I've done my best to trace it all to its source, but without success. Now comes the second affair, and I find the home office and police taking all these ugly rumors for evidence and framing a murder theory quite vaguely and off-hand, without the slightest foundation that would stand up in a court of law."

"I'm afraid the murder is a little more than a theory by now, Mr. Ellington. You know, of course, that a bullet was discovered in the boy's head."

"So I understand. But I still say that to deduce murder from such evidence is the most fatuous thing I ever heard of! Who would or could have shot the boy? On the one hand you have absolutely no reason at all why the boy could have been murdered, and on the other hand you have a very likely reason why the boy could have taken his own life!"

"Really?" Guthrie leaned forward with as much interest as if the idea were absolutely new to him. "Yet another theory, Mr. Ellington? Come now, you must give us details."

And Ellington proceeded, with a fluency rather unexpected in a man of his type, to outline the identical theory that Roseveare had previously outlined to Revell, and that the latter had recapitulated for Guthrie's benefit. Guthrie listened with every appearance of respectful attention and nodded gravely when Ellington had finished. "A highly ingenious theory, Mr. Ellington," he commented. "Is it important to ask if you thought of it yourself?"

Ellington looked for a moment on the edge of a complete explosion of temper. Guthrie continued: "I'm really not meaning to be offensive at all. Only I happen to know that Doctor Roseveare has given his support to the same theory and I should like to know whether he suggested it to you or you to him. It doesn't very much matter, of course."

Guthrie Puts Questions.

"It was his idea, first of all," said Ellington gruffly, after a pause. "I'm not the sort of person who could have thought of such a thing and I won't pretend I am. But I do entirely indorse it—every word of it."

"Quite," agreed Guthrie. "And thanks for being so confidential. You really are helping me tremendously . . . By the way, I understand you missed a revolver of yours quite recently?"

"Yes." Ellington's face went a little pale.

"I wish you'd tell me how it happened."

"I missed it yesterday—I opened the drawer where it usually was and found it gone. The drawer was unlocked."

Guthrie nodded as if in complete satisfaction and understanding. After a pause he continued: "Oh, by the way, Mr. Ellington, you don't happen to have missed anything else lately, do you? Not a weapon—but just—well, anything?"

Ellington seemed puzzled. "No—at least I don't think I have. Why?"

"Oh, I only wondered. I thought perhaps you might have lost, say a cricket bat."

"A cricket bat?" A curious look of astonishment came into his eyes. "That's really very extraordinary, you know. For I do believe I have lost one—now you come to remind me of it. I was looking for it in the sports pavilion the other day."

"You have a locker in the pavilion, I suppose?"

"Yes, but I'm afraid it's a locker that doesn't lock." A touch of his earlier and perhaps more formal truculence returned to him. "People here borrow one's possessions in a most disgraceful way. Ah, but I see . . . are you suggesting that the cricket bat and the revolver are connected in any way?"

"My dear Mr. Ellington, I'm suggesting nothing at all. But I really am most grateful to you for answering my questions and before you go there's only one other thing I want to say. And that is, do you mind if I stay here for half an hour or so and talk to someone else whom I have asked to meet me here?"

Some seconds after Ellington's footsteps had ceased to echo down the corridor and staircase, Revell cautiously peered round the edge of the partition. Guthrie was relighting his pipe and grinning. "What an unfortunate man, Revel," he exclaimed. "Do you think I ought to have arrested him?"

"It depends whether you think him guilty. Do you?"

"Well, there's rather a good deal against him, you know. Motive, of course, to begin with. And then the missing revolver."

"He gave us that information himself, remember."

"Oh, yes. But not until Roseveare had told him that my man had found something. He may have thought it good tactics to come forward with a voluntary statement. As it happens, what my man found wasn't the revolver, so our friend Ellington has thoughtfully made us a free gift of valuable evidence."

"It wasn't the revolver?"

"Fraid not."

"I suppose you're waiting for me to ask again what it really was."

"Not at all. And, in any case, I don't propose to tell you—not yet, anyhow. Perhaps it won't be long before you find out, though."

'Snow Burning' Of Fair Faces Easily Treated

New "Butterscotch" Bags in Dull, Shiny Finish Now Available.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF YOU'RE one of those great out-of-doors women who hies forth each week-end to the land of ice and snow then hearken ye! You know as well as we do what a devilish way snow has of playing funny not too agreeable tricks with sunlight. Bright mid-winter sun reflected from the dazzling surfaces that gladdens the ski-borne heart plays hob with complexions devitalized by steam heated indoor air. Just take a look around you. Among the minor casualties of many a returning "ski-trip train" are bothersome cases of "snow-burn."

An ideal way to trick sun and snow into evoking a professional looking "ski tan" instead of the customary raw redness is to fortify the complexion with a certain lotion created originally for sunburns.

This first-aid toward a painless "out-of-doors" look has been proven over a number of seasons to be "just grand" for permitting the skin to take its fill of health giving tanning rays without exacting the usual penalty of being burned at the stake.

Lotion Suggested.

THERE'S one beauty expert we know about who has the situation well in hand. She says 'phooey' to winter. Let the winds howl and the snow fly and the water freeze in your radiator but there's one way just the same of keeping the skin on your legs—and arms—and hands—smooth and soft. You simply use a rich soothing lotion that takes the chap and roughness right away.

It's an old-timey lotion made by an up-to-day cosmetician. A combination of almond, honey and cucumber, it works rapidly and effectively. Since it's devoid of all alcohol it's positively free of all drying effects.

For economy's sake why not try the large size. Keep it on your bathroom shelf constantly and let it remind you that your legs—and arms—and hands—need only a little thought at the zero hour to keep them soft, smooth and comfortable.

"Butterscotch" Colors.

SINCE "butterscotch" is the newest accessory color no wonder it's in demand. The fact is, it would be new or not, for it's that perfectly luscious shade of tawny tan that does things to an outfit.

It's a grand shade for lots of reasons. It's practical because it won't soil right off the dot. It can be worn with all other colors—including black. And it's becoming to blondes, brunettes and rustics.

"Butterscotch" bags in smooth or rough, shiny or dull leather in all the latest styles are available now in a large downtown store.

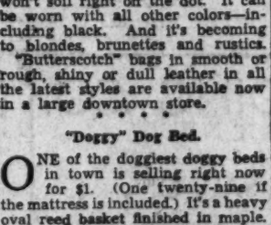
Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY ARE a hearty, hospitable family with a house that's not near big enough to hold them all. So to save a room they have their living room and dining room in one but it's big enough to hold everything very gallantly. Their furniture is informal and maple and the room has wide windows at one end and a big fireplace at the other. They have arranged the furniture in the grandest way. In the two corners at either side of the windows, they have a pair of open shelf corner cupboards (4, 5), and just in front of the windows, they placed their sturdy trestle table (2) with benches to match (1, 3). On the wall opposite the door went the secretary desk with a windsor chair.



Then at right angles to the fireplace (11), they placed the sofa (13) with a lamp table at the left end and a coffee table (14) just in front of it. Two easy chairs 8, 10) went opposite with an occasional table (9) between. But what in the world do they do when company overflows the place and there aren't enough places for everybody to sit? It goes without saying that the benches that go with the trestle table do their part. Besides they have a big sufficiency of leather hassocks that stack away in a closet when not in use but take care of a big crowd on short notice.

'All-American' Meal Enlists Every State

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

EVERY section of the country has a contribution to make to the All-American meal and it is a matter of astonishment to the standards of culinary arts when they discover the variety and flavor of viands native to the several States.

The pride with which a United States Senator will defend his pot liquor, baked beans or citrus food as the best food output of the entire country serves as witness.

Any native Louisianan can discourse by the hour on the virtues of New Orleans crayfish bisque. New Yorkers will rave about the cruller, Boston food fans delight in extolling the fine flavors of Cape Cod clam chowder while the Virginia hot loaf made of potatoes was one of the reasons even the most ardent of Democratic housewives there did not particularly care for the potato control act and its possible limiting the free use of this universal dinner dish.

Georgia steps forward at this moment with a candidate for honors in the All-American meal class. It is crackling bread, a delicacy outsiders have to learn to like, but once the taste is acquired, it is difficult to satisfy their appetites for the tempting bread. Any Washington housewife who wants to give a Georgia flavor to a meal can do so by using this recipe:

Crackling Bread, Georgia Style.

1 quart white corn meal
1 teaspoon salt
1 heaping cup cracklings (cut in small pieces)
Boiling water

Sift the meal and salt into a bowl, add enough boiling water to make a stiff dough. Add the cracklings, which have been already fried mix well with the meal, and mold into oblong cakes, as for corn pone. Bake in a biscuit tin in a hot oven until brown and crusty.

"Here I am with my Brunswick stew," North Carolina will exclaim, and this is the way it is made:

North Carolina Brunswick Stew.

1 frying sized chicken
2 onions
1 pound fresh lima beans
4 ears green corn
3 ripe tomatoes
½ cup cooking sherry
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons fresh bacon drippings
½ cup fresh bread crumbs
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
3 cups cold water.

Slice the onions and fry them in the bacon grease, and as they begin to color add the chicken, cut as for frying, and salted. Fry over a low fire, turning to brown on both sides.

When done, pour off the grease and put chicken and onions in a pot that is heavy enough not to let its contents burn (in North Carolina, an iron pot is used). Add three cups of water, peeled and quartered tomatoes, Worchestershire sauce, sherry and salt and pepper. Cook for one-half hour over a very slow fire, then add lima beans and corn cut from the ear. Let simmer an hour longer, slowly, then add butter and bread crumbs and cook one-half hour longer.

This stew is always served at barbecues, but even a native North Stater cannot decide whether it is a soup or a meat course.

33 of 100 Recent Brides Employed

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 28.—Thirty-three out of one hundred recent Minneapolis brides are employed, and contribute an average of $61.58 each per month to the family exchequer, according to a questionnaire investigation into the financial circumstances of 100 typical newly established households by a well known insurance company.

The 100 recently married couples were picked at random from City Hall lists. Ninety-one of the bridegrooms are employed, earning an average of $103.32 each per month. Of the nine unemployed husbands, one is on relief and two have brides who are employed at regular salaries.

Seventy-one of the one hundred couples report cash on hand and in bank averaging $387.07 each. Fifty-seven of the couples have automobiles. Only two bridegrooms out of the 100 are in business for themselves; only three own their own homes.

Central High Teacher First Named in '84

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TODAY, FOR THE last time, Miss Sarah E. Simons will sit at her desk in Central High School conferring with teachers, discussing courses of study and examining text books.

Tomorrow, her career as teacher and supervisor will be exchanged for work with less routine and more leisure.

For 50 years she has been connected with the D. C. public schools. For the past 30, she has been head of the department of English in the high schools.

"But you can't go on forever," said this quiet, modest little woman yesterday. "There must be a break somewhere. I shall miss it all, even the routine that inevitably goes with any type of supervision. I shall miss, particularly, my association with the finest corps of English teachers anywhere."

Glad She Taught.

Discussing her career, she said she was thankful she chose the profession she did. "Of course, when I started out in 1884, teaching was the only line of work open to women," she averred. "But if I had not liked it, I could have gone into something else later."

She emphasized she has enjoyed her work "from first to last;" has been thrilled to watch the department expand from 5 teachers to 195; has found it fascinating to observe changes in methods of instruction, in attitudes of pupils.

In contrast to methods formerly used, the initiative comes from pupils rather than teachers, she said. "Furthermore, the modern trend is to substitute the grammar of theory for the grammar of use. But we still use drill methods to fasten fundamentals in the pupil's mind."

"Pupils Think on Feet."

She mentioned also the rise of interest in oral English and creative writing. "Pupils are taught to think and speak on their feet much more than they were when I went to school," she said.

She pointed out there is more freedom among pupils today than ever before, "but it is freedom under control," she added. "It is liberty without license. True, you find fewer 'modest violets' in classrooms today than in those of the past, but you also find fewer unruly pupils."

Like most teachers of English, Miss Simons is more interested in literature than in grammar, but she expressed no preference for any period, writer or work. "I find something of interest in each one," she said. Thus, she has enjoyed teaching and arranging courses to include them all—from Chaucer to Yeats and from the American colonial writers to Edwin Arlington Robinson and Robert Frost.

But tomorrow, all that will be folded into her past. She will devote her time to other interests. During her years as teacher and supervisor her avocation has been writing and editorial work. She has written a textbook, "American Literature Through Illustrative Readings," which is now used in the District of Columbia high schools. She is also the author of "English Problems in the Solving," "A Shakespeare Festival," and a number of magazine articles.

Tomorrow, her avocation becomes her vocation. She will continue her editorial work and her writing, and she will have time to travel, rest and read to her heart's content.

To Spend Some Time.

On March 5, she will leave by boat for California. "For a good many years all my traveling has been done in June, July and August, the regular vacation time for teachers," she said. "Boarding a boat while schools are still in session will be a new experience for me."

She expects to spend some time in California. Just how long, she does not know. "There will be no pressing duties to rush me back by any certain time," she said, a note of wistfulness in her voice.

In 1884, she received her first appointment in the D. C. schools, as teacher of the second grade. In 1894 she resigned and went to California to attend Stanford University. In 1897 she received her B. A. degree from that institution; and in 1900, her M. A. degree.

From then through 1905 she taught English and German in Central High School. In 1906 she was appointed head of the English departments, D. C. high schools.

Human's Food Tract Similar To Laboratory

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FROM every point of view we may regard the digestive apparatus as a highly specialized chemical laboratory provided with conveyors that will expose food materials to solution and absorption. Food that passes too rapidly along the tract is not properly utilized. Food that passes too slowly (persistent constipation) may sometimes lead to the taking in of decomposition products that are harmful. What is the plan of this digestion machine?

A tube of varying width extends from the mouth to the end of the intestine and includes the stomach. In a sense the body is built around it.

Digestion begins when food enters the mouth, where it is chewed and comes in contact with the saliva. In addition to moistening the food the saliva contains an enzyme which starts the digestion of starches.

Passes Into Stomach.

After food is swallowed it passes into the stomach via the tube known as the esophagus. When it reaches the stomach it is thoroughly mixed with gastric juice, which contains many more enzymes such as pepsin, which aids in the solution of proteins; rennin, which coagulates milk; and lipase, which starts the digestion of fat. Here also is found hydrochloric acid, which is essential for the continuation of the process.

Solid food remains in the stomach for several hours. In normal persons it is released slowly into the first part of the intestine (duodenum), a bit at a time, by the periodical opening and closing of the stomach outlet (the pylorus).

The absorption of food takes place largely from the small intestine, which is about 25 feet in length, and from two to seven days may be required for food to reach the bowel outlet [anus]. During this period much of the dissolved contents [digested food] is absorbed by the lymph and the blood. Some of it is carried to the liver and some enters the blood stream.

Colon Matter Liquid.

By the time the food mass reaches the colon very little nutritious material should remain, the debris consisting largely of vegetable fibers [cellulose] and other undigested substances. The material entering the colon is largely liquid.

It is in the colon that bacteria greatly increase in number and variety, although we must recall that bacteria may be found anywhere along the intestinal tract.

Gradually the colon propels its contents onward, at the same time absorbing water and some remaining food elements. The material becomes more and more solid until it finally reaches the rectum.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

NOTE TO ORPHAN GIRL: Your letter, saying "I have no education and am always wondering what I am going to do for a living," was printed in this column January 26. The following day a woman whose avocation in life is helping socially maladjusted women and girls find themselves—as the phrase goes—offered to take you under her wing and help you solve your problem. If you will communicate with me by telephone or letter, giving your name and address, I shall be glad to put you in touch with her.

* * * *

In fitting your letter and my answer into the space allocated the column on that day, some of my suggestions to you were necessarily omitted. I will here repeat one suggestion which may be a helpful pointer: make an effort, by following the classified advertising columns, to find a place in some household as mother's helper; arrange to study at night and thus gradually fit yourself for the work you most want to do. As a resident of the District, you are eligible for free enrollment in local night schools, although you will need to provide your own books. The next term opens February 3, and classes are held at Central, McKinley, Roosevelt and Hine Junior high schools.

* * *

Mr. E. J. Lockwood, director of night schools in the District of Columbia, can give you all information about classes. His office is at Wilson Teachers College, Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest; his telephone number, National 6000, branch 308. There is no royal road to success for those born without advantages, but there is always a way out of ignorance and idleness for those who seek to find it.

M. H.

Wrong Telephone Number.

NOTE TO MISS H. S.: Owing to a typographical error, the telephone number of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of community center recreational projects in Washington, was given National 3000 in this column January 25. The correct number is (and should have read) National 1300. This was in response to your question as to whether there are any free schools of the dance in Washington. Dancing classes conducted by the Community Center, for which a charge of 25 cents an evening is made, are, to the best of my knowledge, the nearest approach to free dancing classes offered in Washington.

M. H.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: It is about a year now since I made your acquaintance down "This Business of Living" avenue. May I say your tactful, intelligent, constructive advice is in my opinion the best of its kind in journalism today? Since childhood I've been a regular reader of such columns and must confess I've always had a yen to write such a column myself.

* * * *

My chief reason for writing you today is to offer a suggestion to "X. Y. Z.," whose letter, published in your column of January 25, touched on the subject of a sound philosophy of life for those nearing the mark of three score years and ten. If he has not read "Journey's End," a novel, by Marque Maier, I believe he has much pleasure in store for himself. I believe he will find it helpful in pointing the way to a philosophy of life making for happiness and contentment during declining years. My own copy is a second edition, published by the Christopher Publishing House, 1140 Columbus avenue, Boston, Mass. With best wishes for your continued success, I am, sincerely yours.

M. E. T.

* * * *

DEAR M. E. T.: Thank you for your gracious letter. I hope your recommendation of "Journey's End" as good reading matter for those approaching the age of 70 comes to the attention of the man who signed himself "X. Y. Z." The professional life of a problem columnist is no bed of roses, but it is a challenging occupation for one who likes people—as I do.

Daughters of 1812 Will Honor Leaders

The District of Columbia Society, Daughters of 1812, will entertain Mrs. John F. Weinman, the national president, as the guest of honor at a meeting in national headquarters tomorrow. Mr. Edwin M. Lewis, editor of the Cathedral Age, will give an illustrated lecture on the Cathedral. The District 1812 Society will present a State flag to the Cathedral in April.

Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, former president; Mrs. William Kelsey, national registrar; Mrs. Byron T. Gardner, Miss Florence Lancaster and Miss Grace Rogers. The hospitality committee, consisting of Mrs. Don L. Skidmore, chairman; Mrs. Clarence E. Curtis and Mrs. Katharine F. Billings, will receive the guests.

D. C. Traffic Hearings Set For Monday

Reps. Carpenter, Reed Tour City to View the Situation.

Former Opposes Taking Policemen Off Duty for Escorts.

Criticism of the traditional practice of calling policemen off traffic duty to stand guard at a private or official reception or to escort visiting dignitaries, was voiced yesterday by Representative Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, while announcing that public hearings will be opened by the traffic sub-committee of the House District Committee Monday morning.

He explained that he is not familiar enough with conditions to state whether there are enough traffic policemen, but he stated that whatever the number they should be permitted to remain on traffic duty exclusively.

Earlier in the day Carpenter, as chairman of the sub-committee, and Representative Reed (Republican), of Illinois, made an automobile tour of the Capital under the direction of officials of the American Automobile Association.

Confer With A. A. A. Officials.

Afterward they conferred at A. A. A. headquarters with Russell E. Singer, general manager, and A. J. Montgomery, director of the automobile association.

Among the "bad intersections" they visited was Mount Pleasant and Irving streets, Adams Mill road and Lanier place, and other crossings near Eighteenth and Columbia road.

Carpenter declined to comment specifically upon any of the intersections, but observed that he had noticed a great deal of double parking. He also suggested that the truck delivery business might be held up each day until after the morning rush period.

At other times, he said, he noted a tendency of Washington motorists to beat the lights and to speed. The latter practice, he believes, has been greatly restricted by the present campaign to curb speeding.

"We are not trying to solve the parking problem or eliminate congestion," he said in explaining the purpose of the hearings.

Would Make Streets Safer.

"Our chief purpose is to make the streets safer for pedestrians and motorists and to reduce the number of traffic accidents."

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and other District officials will be the first witnesses. Experts of the A. A. A. will follow with specific suggestions and remedies for traffic ills.

The sub-committee has not decided yet how far it will open the hearings to the general public. Because it fears lay witnesses may deluge it with complaints and suggestions regarding trivial matters, the hearing may be confined to those persons who have something broad in scope to contribute.

Louis Briscoe, colored, 78, of 357 McLean avenue southeast, was seriously hurt when he was struck by an automobile at Delaware avenue and I street southwest. He was treated at Providence Hospital for a skull fracture. The auto, police said, was operated by Frank M. Jeffries, 25, of 929 C street southwest.

"Traffic Trap" Charged

Frederick, Md., Jan. 30.—David C. Winebrenner 3d, former secretary of state of Maryland, last night announced that he had filed complaints charging that a "traffic trap" is being operated in the Eighth Precinct in Washington.

Winebrenner, who publishes a weekly paper here, said he had filed his complaints with the Automobile Club of Maryland and with Representative David J. Lewis, of the Sixth Maryland District. He said that he had received numerous complaints from residents of this city.

The publisher described the "traffic trap" thus: "Police officers wait in ambush along Connecticut and Wisconsin avenues until an autoist slips by a traffic light.

"The offender is escorted to the Eighth Precinct Station to post $10 collateral. The trial is so arranged that the offender is better off to forfeit the collateral than to lose the time and go to the trouble to await a hearing."

Man Shot by Bandit; $1,300 Is Day's Loot

Girl, Engaged, Loses Her Diamond, Beats Thief, All in 24 Hours.

One man was shot and loot valued at more than $1,300 was obtained in a series of holdups and burglaries here yesterday.

S. V. Haley, 25, of 2153 K street northwest, was shot in the right leg when he resisted two unidentified youths who attempted to hold him up as he entered his car in the 1900 block Nineteenth street northwest. The wound was superficial. He was dismissed from Emergency Hospital.

Florence Feass reported jewelry worth $1,260 was stolen from her apartment at 1028 Connecticut avenue northwest by a thief who gained entrance with a duplicate key.

Liquor Dealer Robbed.

Two unidentified colored men robbed Charles Weinstein of $80 in his liquor store at 311 H street northwest. One of the intruders fired twice at Russell Follin, 1128 North Jackson street, Clarendon, Va., a customer, when he failed to throw up his hands. He was not wounded.

Edward J. Mornini, an Independent Laundry driver, was robbed of 56 cents by two unidentified men while making a delivery in the rear of the 2300 block of Eighteenth street northwest.

An unidentified colored youth escaped after he snatched a bottle of whisky from a counter in a liquor store at 1537 Connecticut avenue. He was chased for two blocks by Robert Waller, 27, a clerk. He dropped the bottle as he fled.

Bride-elect Tells Woes.

As it would be described in Tin Pan Alley, life is going 'round and 'round these days for Miss Idelle Wilson, of 1601 Argonne place northwest.

She became engaged Wednesday night, lost the diamond out of her engagement ring yesterday and figured in an attempted holdup last night.

Brown eyes flashing, Miss Wilson last night related her experience to police.

"Oh, my goodness," she lamented, "I wonder what will happen to me next."

She was returning home from dinner in a restaurant nearby when an unidentified man darted from an alley on Mount Pleasant street, between Hobart and Harvard streets northwest, shouted a threat and snatched at her purse.

Mobile Purse and Beau.

"I suppose I was too excited to scream," she explained. "I just squeezed my pocketbook with my arm and ran across the street. He didn't follow me."

Asked how much money the pocketbook—still in her possession—contained, she smiled broadly and evaded:

"Well, it was the day before pay day, you know."

Miss Wilson said she lost the setting from her ring while at lunch in the dining room of the Resettlement Administration, where she is employed. A friend found the gem and returned it a few hours later.

Merchants Oppose 40-Hour Work Bill

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday supported the laundry owners in opposition to the bill which would fix a maximum 40-hour work week for women in the District.

Opposition of the association was expressed to the Commissioners in a letter which said the bill, if enacted, would reduce employment and drive industry from Washington.

"It is the opinion of the board of governors of this association," the association told the Commissioners, "that such a bill would seriously affect employment of women in the District."

Approval of the bill had been given in Congress by the Commissioners last May. Hearings on the measure are to be held next month by a sub-committee of the House District Committee.

Effort to Revive District Airport Bill Promised

Conferences Await Return of Tydings; Dual Plan Believed Shelved.

Another effort will be made to revive the District airport bill, left hanging in conference last session, probably early next week, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday.

Conferences have been awaiting the return to the Capitol of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, the author of the Senate bill substituted for the House measure. Tydings returned this week, but is out of the city over the week-end.

Whether the Senate and House managers will be able to agree on the personnel of the commission proposed to select a site for a District airport is conjectured.

"I haven't changed my position a bit," Nichols said.

The Senate conferees wished to leave the selection of the personnel of the commission entirely to the President, whereas the House managers sought a mandatory appointment of representatives of the Commerce, Postoffice and War departments.

The compromise plan of Assistant Secretary Johnson, of the Commerce Department, which would set up two airports for the District, one at Washington Airport and the second eventually at Gravelly Point, appears to have been shelved because of Congressional opposition.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, stated emphatically his opposition to the proposal, and to what he termed "interference" of the Commerce Department in municipal affairs.

The House District Committee reported favorably on part of the plan, but withheld approval of other part. It recommended immediate acquisition and development of Washington Airport, but intimated its continued opposition of Gravelly Point, which was denounced last year by the special airport sub-committee.

Parks Board Favors New War Building

Tennis Courts on Scene of Bonus Riots Also Get Approval.

Replacing of Chain Span by Low-Level Bridge Is Indorsed.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday acted favorably on such diversified projects as a $23,000,000 War Department building, downtown tennis courts on the scene of the bonus riots in 1932 and replacement of Chain Bridge, the Potomac River's most ancient span in this vicinity.

The commission also voted to pursue its fight on the Virginia-D. C. boundary report, reaffirming its support of Gravelly Point as a municipal airport site, urged adding of another span to Key Bridge and approved plans for development of various playgrounds and recreation centers.

Deluged by telephone calls from residents who read in yesterday's Post that action loomed in the naming of certain avenues for States, the commission named a group to consult with Chairman William H. King and members of the Senate District Committee.

Many of the callers protested against changing the name of Reno road to Oklahoma avenue, as provided in a bill introduced by Senator Gore. Others offered suggestions that Potomac, Branch and other avenues be named for States which have been neglected to date.

Track Removal Waits.

Commissioner Helvin C. Hazen, ex-officio member of the planning body; Edward A. Dent, District surveyor; John Nolen, jr., director of planning, and Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, were authorized to discuss with the Senate District Committee.

Pending further studies, the planners took no action on a proposal, embodied in a pending House bill, to remove all street car tracks in the immediate vicinity of the Capitol nor on a staff report recommending changes to control erection of gasoline stations.

The new War Department Building, funds for which are provided in the 1937 budget, would be located on a site bounded by Twenty-first, Twenty-third, C and E streets. The $23,000,000 estimate covers land acquisition as well as construction costs.

The commission also approved location of the new General Accounting Office Building on Independence avenue between Third and Fourht streets southwest. This is Government-owned land.

A downtown recreation mecca, sandwiched between the buildings in the triangle and wooded Union Square, is contemplated in plans submitted by the office of National Capital Parks and approved yesterday for building tennis, volley ball and horseshoe pitching courts in the two squares on either side of Fourth street, between Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues. None of the elm trees will be disturbed.

New Bridge Sought.

Vacant lots now, they will be converted into play centers to compensate for elimination of tennis courts and other facilities in the Washington Monument grounds to make way for the flood control dyke. They were the scene of the 1932 bonus riots in which two "marchers" were fatally injured.

Modifying its previous stand, the planing body voted to back the District Commissioners in urging early razing of the dangerous Chain Bridge and its replacement by a low-level bridge. Formerly the planners advocated construction of a high-level bridge a Little Falls, about half a mile upstream.

The Commission still believes in its original plan, but acceded to the other view that concentration on the less expensive project will bring results more quickly. Funds for replacement of Chain Bridge, which has been condemned by engineers, have repeatedly been denied by the Budget Bureau or Congress.

Allotment of PWA or WPA money to dredge the Potomac channel and deposit materials at Gravelly Point as a preliminary step in airport development again was urged by the commission.

The commission, presided over by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, will continue its meeting today. This afternoon will be devoted to a joint session with the Fine Arts Commission.

A House bill authorizing a memorial to settlers whose land grants embrace the City of Washington was passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the White House.

It was stipulated that the site and design of the memorial, to be constructed by the Daughters of the American Colonists, must be sion of Fine Arts and that the Gov- approved by the National Commis- ernment shall be put to no expense in connection with the project.

Pepco Faces 3-Way Slash From P. U. C.

Order Expected Today for Cut in Rates and Returns.

Valuation Also Slated for Reduction by $2,000,000.

Reduction in electric current rates, reduction in the rate of return on its investment allowed the Potomac Electric Power Co., and reduction in the valuation rate base of the company is expected to be ordered by the Public Utilities Commission today.

Whether the decision of the commission will result in a court fight which shall upset the sliding scale agreement under which rates have been adjusted downward annually for the last decade, is not known.

Dr. William McClellan, president of the company, served notice on the commission, just before public hearings closed, that 7 per cent return on the company valuation was the least which could be considered a "reasonable" rate of return.

Determination of the commission to reduce that rate was indicated when the commission called the hearing. Subsequently the Washington Gas Light Co. accepted a 6.3 per cent rate under a more stringent sliding-scale agreement.

It is not much of a secret that members of the Public Utilities Commission are willing to have the Potomac Electric Power Co. seek to upset its sliding-scale agreement. Commission officials believe that out of the ensuing legal battle the company will come off second best and the consumers will benefit.

The $69,000,000 valuation of the company is expected to be ordered reduced by the commission by at least $2,000,000. The rate of return is expected to be reduced to 6.5 per cent. How much rates would be reduced is problematical.

Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission, is busy figuring various applications of figures. The company, too, is busy figuring. Results of these computations are expected to be ready for consideration by the commission today.

Trinidad Citizens Favor Race Track

The Trinidad Citizens Association last night voted for legalized horse racing in the District and against a return of prohibition here. The group met at Wheatley School.

In a resolution adopted unanimously the association opposed the proposed enlargement of the Juvenile Court's powers, stating that it was "loath to surrender parental authority to any agency."

As a method of combating crime the group urged prompt trials for persons indicted for robberies, housebreakings and other serious offenses.

94 Candles on Cake, 'Boy' of '61 Still Spry

Nine Veterans, Youngest 87, Plan for G. A. R. Meeting Here.

There were 94 candles on Comrade E. D. Godfrey's birthday cake yesterday, but he felt just as hale and chipper as he did three-quarters of a century ago when he was a blue-clad soldier chasing gray-clad soldiers, and vice versa.

It was a big day not only for the white-bearded Godfrey but also for his eight G. A. R. buddies, including the national commander in chief, assembled here to make plans for the Army's encampment in the Capital next September.

They were dined and toasted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. P. McElroy, 1412 Sixteenth street northwest, during the afternoon, and last night were royally banqueted at the Hamilton Hotel.

Soldier Godfrey, who lives at 1411 Monroe street and who is adjutant of the Department of the Potomac, was the "daddy" of yesterday's activities and Past Commander in Chief Russell Martin, of Los Angeles, the "baby."

A mere 87 years, Col. Martin nosed out Soldier William F. Dorsey by a few months for the juvenile honors. The latter is a member of Kit Carson Post, Department of the Potomac.

In between the oldest and youngest were Commander in Chief Oley Nelson, 91, of Slater, Iowa; Judge James Willett, Tana, Iowa; Martin Van Buren Stone, Jamestown, N. Y., and Fred Mixer, of Washington, all 90, and John M. Kline and John T. Ryan, both of Washington, 89 each.

Gathered yesterday to honor the Civil War veterans were heads of every women's organization affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic: Mrs. Mary J. Love, president, National Woman's Relief Corps; Miss Wynnye G. Williamson, president, Ladies of the G. A. R., and Mrs. Agnes Upell Boyce, president, Daughters of Union Veterans.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, has been appointed chairman of the committee on arrangements for the September encampment.

Coblentz Trial Feb. 17 On Bank Fraud Charge

The trial of former State Senator Emory L. Coblentz, president of the closed Central Trust Co., of Frederick, Md., on charges of "fraudulent corporate misrepresentation" has been tentatively set for February 17, according to an announcement by James Clark, special prosecutor. The trial will be in Baltimore.

Johnsons' Will Leaves Widow Entire Income

Mrs. Olive C. Johnson, widow of the late Henry A. Johnson, 1446 Monroe street northwest, a great-great - grandnephew of George Washington, will receive the income from his $75,000 estate for life, it was shown yesterday when a petition for the probate of his will was filed in the District Supreme Court.

In addition, the will disposed of two priceless colonial relics, one of them a cigar case presented to Washington by Lafayette, and the other a wax impression of Washington's private seal. The two were bequeathed to the Ladies' Mount Vernon Association for exhibition in Mount Vernon.

Another provision of the will created a $30,000 trust fund which is to be shared equally by seven charitable and religious organizations. They are the District Red Cross, Salvation Army, Associated Charities, Epiphany Protestant Episcopal Church, Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, The Fourth Church of Christ Scientist, the Columbia Heights Christian Church, the Washington Home for Incurables, and the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church.

All the estate left on Mrs. Johnson's death in excess of $30,000 is to be given a group of nephews, nieces and stepchildren.

Burke Retires Today; Post To Thompson

Assistant Detective Chief Will Be Promoted to Head of Bureau.

Lieut. Keck Advanced as Neston Is Slated for Aid to Hazen.

Capt. Bernard W. Thompson, assistant chief of the Detective Bureau, is to be made chief of the bureau and assistant superintendent of police by the District Commissioners today.

Lieut. Ira Keck, who has been police aid to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Gen. Herbert B. Crosby before him, is to be made assistant chief of the bureau with the rank of captain.

Private Henry C. Nestor, "the singing cop," is to be named the police aid to Commissioner Hazen.

Recommended by Brown.

Whether all of the formalities incident to this program will be completed today is not certain, but eventually they will be.

Private Nestor, an amateur singer about town, has sung at local theaters and at various gatherings of the Board of Trade and other groups.

Appointment of Private Nestor as aid to Commissioner Hazen, who has immediate supervision of the Police Department, was recommended by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Promotion of Capt. Thompson and Lieut. eKck and Private Nestor follows the request for retirement by Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of the Detective Bureau.

Burke Quits Today.

Inspector Burke, who came up from a patrolman to be assistant superintendent of police ad chief of the Detective Bureau, is to be retired, effective today.

Widely regarded by members of the force as one of the outstnading men in the police department, Inspector Burke came to the apex of his official career at a time when the police department was on the gridiron.

Inspector Burke's request for retirement was because of ill health.

Psychology, Children Topic of Book Reviews

"Ordinary Difficulties of Everyday People," a book by Dr. J. R. Oliver, Baltimore psychiatrist, will be reviewed in the community room of the Northeastern Branch of the Public Library, Seventh and Maryland avenue northeast, tonight at 8 o'clock, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced yesterday.

Miss Lucile Walsh, of the sociology division, Central Library, will speak on "New Books of Psychology and Child Study." In addition to Dr. Oliver's book, she will review "Your Child Is Normal," by Grace Adams, and "Growing Superior Children," by I. N. Kugelmass.

Throttle Open—Motor Roaring at 70, Life and Limb Periled—Youth Didn't Care Then, Now He Wants 'Break': He Didn't Set It

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has been cruising in a police car. To vary his activities, he again visited the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators Permits yesterday. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the twenty-first in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Thrilles wide open . . . engines roaring . . . tires screaming . . . terrified motorists scurrying to the right and left . . . startled onlookers staring in amazement—two cars were racing along upper Connecticut avenue northwest.

One was a police car, the other was driven by a 22-year-old youth, son of an Army officer. The youth was in the lead—a sneer on his face. He glanced at his speedometer. It registered 70 miles an hour. He was approaching the District Line. Soon he would be "safe."

More gas, more speed. His car streaked into Maryland, with the policeman still half a block away. The youthful speed demon had escaped temporarily. The pursuing policeman had his license number.

Subsequently, the offending young man was brought into District Traffic Court. He was heavily fined. And on top of that, his permit was revoked.

This was several months ago. Yesterday, as we again "sat in" on hearings before the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators' Permits, the youth appealed for restoration of his right to drive.

It was our second visit to the board in search of the "reason why" behnid violations of traffic laws. We were surprised no little at the youth's humble pleadings—humble, now, as he begged for "one more chnace." But he was far from humble when he roared along the avenue in brazen defiance of capture and utter disgrerda for law, life or property.

This youth brought his elderly mother to strengthen his plea before the board. He wanted to drive again—to be allowed freedom of the streets, as once was his privilege.

Here is the story as told to Board Members M. O. Eldridge, Raymond Sparks and Police Inspector B. A. Lamb:

The youth was eating in a Connecticut avenue restaurant. A policeman entered. He directed profane language at the officer. He was warned. Then he left and entered his car outside. The policeman watched. The youth deliberately drove past a red signal light at Albemarle street. The policeman gave chase.

The youth speeded up. The pursuit ed in and out among various side streets, ack at Albemarle street the pursued car again passed a red light. Then turned north into Connecticut avenue. The policeman watcher his speedometer—40, 45, 50, 60 and finally 70 miles an hour. The heedess, willful law-breaker escaped. And luckily, innocent motorists and pedestrians also escaped without injury—or death.

And then the youth was apprehended a paid a price. But now he is sorry for what he did. He wants a "break." He wants a "refund" on that price. And this was his "reason" yesterday:

"I ost my head, I guest, but I have learned a lesson."

His mother said:

"We acknowledge my son's crime. He has always been a safe driver. Why, he even won a pribe for writing an essay on traffic safety. I need him to drive me to Indiana. We have a new car."

"I had one glass of ale in the restaurant. I did pass the red light—both of them. Yes, sir; I was traveling 70 miles an hour. I knew the policeman was behind me. I tried to get away. I guess what he could to me in the restaurant had something to do with it. I guess I was mad at him."

The policeman spoke up:

"When I tried to draw alongside his car at Morrison street, he swerved into the center of the avenue and almost wrecked me." (The policeman has a family, yet he risked his life to carry out his duty and apprehend the wild driver.)

The youth admitted he swerved to stop the policeman. He admitted he sped otward the District line in the hopes of escaping. He admitted he knew he was defying arrest. He admitted what he did was dangerous and contributed to Washington's traffic enforcement problem.

In fact, he admitted everything—and still wanted a "break" so he might drive again.

"I have been forced to ride on street cars," said the mother.

Here was a case of deliberate law defiance. Here was a youthful driver who "thought he could get away with it."

But he didn't. The board upheld its previous action and recommended to the Commisioners that the youth be denied his permit and ruled from the streets indefinitely.

"Blossom Time," That Hardy, Old Shubert Perennial, Is Coming Back to Capital

Week Booking At the National Is Announced

Miss Skinner's Next Bill; Mr. Meakin Entertains; Amusement Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Gradually the open dates in the National Theater's season of the living drama are filling up.

Beginning on Monday night that distinguished exponent of all that is best in the American theater, the venerable Mr. William Gillette, will begin a week's engagement on the E street boards in a revival of Austin Strong's comedy-drama of "Three Wise Fools."

The next week, beginning on Monday night, February 10, that first gentleman of the theater, Mr. George M. Cohan, will take possession of the same stage in a new play of his own concoction—and that alone is sufficient guarantee of its worth—bearing the title of "Dear Old Darling."

In this new frolic, Mr. Cohan assumes the role of a retired, elderly businessman, set upon by a so-called bevy of beautiful young women—a very tough order.

Then, the week of Monday, February 17, will come Shubert's perennial musical piece, "Blossom Time," with a cast that is said to give it an especially effective interpretation.

Second Subscription Play.

It is interesting to note as these data are jotted down that Mr. Cohan's "Dear Old Darling" will be the second of the American Theater Society of Washington's subscription plays for the current season. This is a considerable concession on the part of Mr. Cohan and rather an honor to him, too.

It was first announced that Lee Ephraim's production of the London hit, "Sweet Aloes," which will star Evelyn Laye in the Diana Wynyard role on this side, would be the second of the season's subscription plays. It now turns out that it will be the third.

Miss Laye and "Sweet Aloes" will come along to the National the week of Monday, February 24. So there we are up to March already in one of the most prolific and most distinguished seasons the local theater of living drama has known since the financial debacle of 1929 and ensuing depression.

Speaking of the National, as we principally have been, Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner tonight will offer her only presentation of her brilliant dramatic sequence devoted to "The Loves of Charles II." This by many is held to be her most important achievement. Personally, I adhere to the view that the cleverest piece of writing, as well as character portrayal in a multifarious sense, that Miss Skinner has brought to the stage as a monodrama is her "Mansion on the Hudson." This to me is a complete, a fully peopled, drama. The others are a succession of detached character impersonations that build to no such dramatic climax as "The Mansion." Everything Miss Skinner does, as a matter of fact, is deserving of the close scrutiny of every lover of the theater.

Ginger Comes to Town.

You who met her at the President's Birthday Balls, scattered around among Washington's foremost hotels last night, probably were as surprised as I was to perceive what a difference there is between the Ginger Rogers of the screen and the same young woman in her persona propria, as we say in the anterooms of the erudite.

Ginger Rogers is a slender, blonde—but not platinum—young woman who seems considerably less angular and ample, in the flesh, than she does upon the silver sheet.

One suspects the camera angles must have something to do with the dimensions she reveals in her co-stellar vehicles with Fred Astaire. Fred is no Gargantua, but he still is a young man of normal height and Ginger always has seemed, in the pictures, about on a parity with him in physical dimensions. I doubt if she is.

But in the matter of charm there can be no argument. Mr. Astaire under no possible circumstances could exert any greater personal appeal than Miss Rogers does. She is an unaffected, buoyant and effervescent young woman who radiates a youthful and irresistible vibrancy and vitality. It is not in the least incomprehensible, once you have met her, to know why she is such a perfect dancing partner for the lad whose sister-partner, the present Lady Cavendish—formerly Adele Astaire—deserted him and his stage career upon the occasion of her distinguished marriage.

The Girl Is Optimist.

"Anybody could dance with Fred," Miss Rogers insists.

Of this I have serious doubts. I can think of a million, more or less, dancers on the stage who could not get to the first tap in a co-stellar endeavor with this extraordinarily endowed young man. Eleanor Powell, perhaps, with her trip-hammer tapping, and maybe one or two of the new exponents of rhythmic dancing, who have come along in the last couple of years, but certainly Miss Rogers is stepping out a bit when she says that anybody can dance with Fred!

She happens to be the only one who is doing it. That ought to mean something to her and Fred and you and me. It probably does. It means that Ginger is a pretty good "hoofer," as the patois of the profession has it, on her own account.

But this youthfulness, pep, dynamic personality and physical misrepresentation on the screen are the things I can not understand.

I know that Clara Kimball Young was multiplied into a figure of Junoesque proportions by the trickery of the motion-picture camera. I recall also that a "serial queen" once came through Washington, who, on the screen, appeared to possess the diminutive dimensions of a Mary Pickford. She was, as a matter of cold fact, the original candidate for the character of the woman wrestler in "Swing Your Lady"—or should have been.

Camera Falls Down.

The point of all this is that Ginger Rogers is not done more than 70 per cent of full justice by the cameras and microphones. It is just one of those things. One of those lamentable things. Ginger is a grand girl and a considerate and patient interviewee. It is too bad that the screen does not reveal her as as charming as she really is. Have an "as" on me!

And no less astonishing than the magnified attractiveness of this capable young artiste, when you meet her, is the ingenuous charm of her mother, whom I still suspect of being a sister. Mrs. Rogers also is a blonde and ingratiating young person whom I accused yesterday of a sort of "stage mother" perfidy that was prevalent in the theater of an earlier day.

"I should know," was the only answer I received to my inquisitorial doubt. It is not possible to go far beyond that in the matter of evidence of lineal authenticity. I still contend that Mrs. Rogers does not look it.

And another thing. To one who has rattled about the inner and outer recesses of the theater for a century or two now, it was pleasant to have this invasion of personable pulchritude come to the Capital under the personal conductorship, in a manner of speaking, of S. Barrett McCormick, publicity director of RKO-Radio Pictures in New York, who ascended to the heights when Bob Sisk went West to become a producer.

"Barry" McCormick and I were associates in an earlier incarnation and I still look back with admiration upon all of the valiant things he did as a pioneer director of the Circle Theater in Indianapolis—not to mention the Tivoli, in its early days, in this city.

Pleasant Time Was Had.

Altogether, yesterday's pow-wow at the Mayflower with Miss Rogers, Mrs. Rogers, Maestro McCormick and Hardie Meakin was a most inspiriting occasion. It lost nothing by the fact that District Commissioner Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur de Titta, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Pollio and others stopped by, from time to time, to exchange persiflage, anecdotes and witty sayings!e

Commissioner Allen was especially pleased by the successful outcome of the most pretentious President's ball program that ever has been put in motion in the District of Columbia. A couple of days ago you could have bought out him and his six major hotels for a dime a dozen, the reservations were moving that slowly. Last night, with a sell-out on his hands, you could not have purchased the amiable Commissioner for a million.

Congratulations, fellow. You did a swell job.

And about those parking tickets, I'll be seeing you later. Just as soon as I get out of jail! Or did you say see Commissioner Hazen?

A phone call from our esteemed young afternoon confrere, Mr. Edward de S. Melcher, brings word that an emergency operation on a throat abscess, performed, appropriately enough at Emergency Hospital by Dr. John Lyons, promises to return him to circulation within the next few days. Mr. Melcher has been confined to his apartment at Wardman Park for the past several days with this infectious business that now is being drain tubed, asceptisized and whatnot into a state of utter negation. He probably will be just as good as new. And that will be approximately good enough. Happy glandings!

One-Acters Begin.

The one-act play tournament of the District of Columbia, being conducted for the first time in the decade of its existence under the auspices of a committee formed from the participating groups of amateur and semi-professional players, will begin next Tuesday night.

Competitive plays will be presented by the entered acting organizations and at the final contest for ranking honors decisions as to the winners of the tournament will be made by the occupants of the drama desks of the local press—may the Lord have mercy on their souls!

For the first time in the history of this admirable competition, cash prizes are to be awarded the winners. These substantial awards are contributed to this year's tournament by Fred Hand, managing director of Constitution Hall, who has been around show business, and vitally interested in it, since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Even as you and I.

We-Rise-to-Remark Note.

Sings Lead in New Cantor Film

When Master Eddie Cantor and his famous Grecian sidekick, Parkyakarkus, appear on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater for the first time today, the leading feminine part in "Strike Me Pink"—formerly known to the trade as "Shoot the Chutes"—will be played by Ethel Merman. And sung by her, too. Miss Merman is one of the most capable of the younger singing comediennes and just missed coming to town in person as an important member of the cast of "Anything Goes," with Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore. "Strike Me Pink" is the reason she did not make it.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague College Foundation presents the Roth String Quartet at the Library of Congress Thursday night in the fourth of five concerts. Program: Quartet in B minor, Op. 50 (Sergei Prokofiev), Quartet No. 4 (Quincy Porter), Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3 (Joseph Haydn).

By the time he arrived at his B minor quartet, Sergei Prokofiev had subdued to a considerable extent his tendency to Puckish pranks, which had caused the conservatives to eye him askance as an enfant terrible. That irrepressible humor of his was still with him, however, and cropped out characteristically in the andante molto movement, where, of all places, he chose to put a scherzo mood.

The entire work sparkles with lively ideas, for that matter, and an inventive wit keeps one's attention alert. Prokofiev is never dull, as some of his modernist confreres are through taking themselves too seriously as propagandists for novelty. He has a quick fancy and an inquisitive mind that darts in unexpected tangents. This unpredictable eccentricity is not merely eratic, though, for he always has a purpose, even in his persiflage.

Quincy Porter's fourth quartet elicits one's admiration, as did his third quartet, performed at the biennial festival last spring. Here is a composer who writes with no concern for color effects, for bizarre tonalities, or for what one may call extra-musical display. There are no mannerisms in his freely dissonant style, which is clear to the point of transparency.

The Haydn quartet of the evening was one of the set composed in 1793 and dedicated to Count Antoine d'Appony. So gallant is its spirit and so effervescent its liveliness that it does not sound like the work of a man of 61. It contains, too, one of those suprises of which I was speaking the other day—a tremolo passage which anticipates Rossini.

Oliver Strunk, chief of the music division, had seen to it that the exhibit in the lobby conformed to the program. There one saw the holograph score of the Prokofiev quartet, the title page of the first edition of Haydn's Opus 74, and the holograph score of Quincy Porter's fifth quartet, finished only last December.

Hollywood, Jan. 30.

EDDIE CANTOR in the flicker "Strike Me Pink" is in his office at the amusement park when Jack La Rue enters. Just to show how tough he is, La Rue, after closing the door, pulls out the knob and throws it away. After firing a gun at Cantor, but to no avail, La Rue becomes frightened and runs out the door. How, asks Arthur Murray, if there was no knob on the door?

In "The Goose and the Gander" Genevieve Tobin has her troubles with a door also. According to Carol Swickert, Miss Tobin opens a door, and she is seen carrying her hat and coat on her arm; then Miss Tobin is seen emerging with her hat and coat on, although she hasn't removed her hand from the door knob.

Alice Faye in "King of Burlesque" begins to sing "I'm shooting High" after having heard it played only once, and thus puzzles me very much, writes Carmela Ponselle, for "I'm a singer, and Miss Faye rarely looked at the notes or words and never missed up on either."

• • • •

Dorothy Wilson in the flicker, "Bad Boy," goes for a ride with her boy friend, Bob. As they come out of the house, says Thomas Bleakley, and get into Bob's car, it is night time. However, in the next scene they are walking in the park, and it is daytime. Anyway, the other flicker on the menu was "Remember Last Night," says Movie Fan Bleakley.

• • • •

James Cagney in the flicker, "Ceiling Zero," is flying back to the airport managed by Pat O'Brien. In this sequence, writes William Kitay, the clock moves backward—and in another sequence there is a flicker flaw. Mr. O'Brien and every one in the transport office rush to the windows to watch a ship land. The clock above the radio table shows 4:40. Cagney lands his plane and coasts along, gets out, plays a scene and then enters the transport office. When Cagney enters the office, the clock above the radio table shows 4:30.

In another sequence, when the plane is lost in the fog, the radio operator keeps saying: "Newark, calling number nine . . . Calling number nine," but a shot of the plane flying through the pea soup fog shows it to be number three.

Fred McMurray in "Hands Across the Table," has explained to Carole Lombard that all his clothes are in Havana; his wardrobe is what he is wearing. Jane Leighton, who says that her specialty is noticing men's clothes wants to know where McMurray got that man's lounging robe he wore in Miss Lombard's apartment. Carole must have been expecting him.

Nats Sell Fred Schulte to Pirates for Waiver Price of $7,500

League Clubs Spurn Nats' Veteran

Lloyd Waner's Illness Causes Pittsburgh to Buy Outfielder.

Handicapped by Broken Ankle, Schulte Slumps in 3d Season Here.

By Shirley Povich,
Sports Editor of The Post.

FOR the standard waiver price of $7,500, the Washington Ball Club yesterday sold Outfielder Fred Schulte to the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League.

All American League clubs waived their claims on Schulte, who in 1935 encountered his worst season in the three years he has worn a Washington uniform. The big, 32-year-old outfielder, reputed to be the strongest man in baseball in any test of brute strength, no longer figured in the plans to reconstruct the Washington team along youthful lines.

Sought Added Power.

The Pirates were eager to acquire Schulte in an effort to bolster their outfield which has been threatened by the illness of Lloyd Waner, for years a Pirate mainstay. Waner, stricken recently with pneumonia, is not counted upon to recover his full strength for the start of the 1936 season.

Schulte, who retires to his Belvidere, Ill., bowling alleys in the off season, was edged out of a regular centerfield post with the Nats last season by the sensational young Jake Powell. Handicapped by a broken ankle he suffered in 1934, the big outfielder, who was so colorless he never earned a nickname in the big leagues, batted only .268 in 1935, playing mostly as a pinch hitter.

No Place in Outfield.

Overstocked with outfielders as the result of the acquisition of Carl Reynolds from Boston and Jesse Hill from the Yankees, Manager Harris saw no place for Schulte in the Nats' outfield which also boasts such candidates as Dee Miles, Johnny Stone, Cecil Travis and Roberto Estallella.

Schulte was famed most, perhaps, for the fact that he never justified the promise his play held out when he graduated from Milwaukee to the St. Louis Browns in 1927. Hailed as "another Ty Cobb" after his sensational exploits at Milwaukee where he batted .347 in 1926, Schulte paid the penalty of minor league fame when his play failed to arouse St. Louis fans despite his 1927 batting average of .317 in 60 games.

On one occasion, Schulte barged into Heinie Manush when both were teammates in the Browns' outfield, and both were knocked cold. In Cleveland two years ago, while dashing in for a short fly, he encountered Manager Joe Cronin, who also was attempting to make the catch, and Cronin was knocked unconscious. In a game at Griffith Stadium several years ago, he crashed into the concrete stands in centerfield with a thud that was heard on Georgia avenue and was carried from the field.

Acquired in 1932.

Fleet i nth eoutfield and a sure catch, Schulte usually crashed the headlines as a result of a crash. Fearless in his roaming over the outfield, the big German was given a wide berth by his outfield colleagues after a series of collisions that hurt.

Schulte was among the players assembled by Manager Joe Cronin during the winter of 1932 when Cronin formed his 1933 pennant-winner. He figured in the deal that also brought Goose Goslin, Carl Reynolds and Walter Stewart from St. Louis in exchange for Outfielder Sammy West and Pitcher Lloyd Brown.

Playing regularly during the pennant-winning year of 1933, Schulte was a bulwark on the Washington team, hitting .295. The following season he hit .298, but he never recovered his speed on the bases or in the outfield after breaking his ankle while sliding during a game in the West in the mid-season of 1934.

The photographic finish system has been installed as an aid to the judges in making their decisions when such a finish is close enough to create a difference of opinion among the patrons.

Tony Canzoneri Stops Bashara, of Norfolk

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, stopped Toots Bashara, of Norfolk, Va., in three rounds via the technical knockout route in their scheduled ten-round fight tonight at the Olympia Club.

Referee Matt Adgie stopped the fight after having a physician examine Bashara's left eye, which was cut about midway of the round. The doctor said continuing the bout might result in serious injury to the eye, so the referee halted the proceedings. Canzoneri weighed 139, a pound less than Bashara.

G. U. Is Routed By Temple, 39 to 17

Held to Five Field Goals; Shield Is Top Scorer With 13 Points.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Held to five field goals, two in the first half and three in the second, Georgetown was no match for the Temple basketball quintet and was defeated, 39 to 17, in an Eastern Collegiate Conference League game before a crowd of 2,000 at Mitten Hall here tonight.

Both teams were having an off night insofar as shooting from the field was concerned, and it was fully six minutes before a floor goal was registered. Georgetown had taken an early lead of 3 to 0 on three fouls, all converted by Bassin, Georgetown's left forward, but once Temple got under way the Hilltoppers never had a chance. Close guarding predominated throughout the game, resulting in many penalties being called against both teams. Temple held a 14-to-8 edge at half-time.

Margin Increased.

On resumption of play in the second chukker Temple's sharpshooters found the range and increased their margin at will, Coach Usilton sending in his substitutes with the game well in hand.

Shields, with six field goals and a foul for a total of 13 points, was high scorer of the game, with Messikomer right behind him with three goals and four fouls for 10 counters. Petroskey and Nolan shared high scoring honors for the visitors with 5 points apiece.

Previously in a tie for runner-up honors with Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Temple tonight took undisputed possession of second place.

Red Dawson New Coach At Tulane

Bierman's Assistant at Minnesota Signed to 4-Year Contract.

Entire Staff Is Changed; Cox, Lautenschlaeger Will Be Dropped.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—A new slate of coaches will handle the football destinies of Tulane University.

Lowell Dawson, better known as "Red," former Tulane quarterback and for the last four years Bernie Bierman's chief assistant a Minnesota, will come to Tulane as head coach, replacing Ted Cox, Dawson's former coach, who was removed after the last football season by the athletic council.

Dawson will bring with him Glenn Seidel, last year's Minnesota captain and quarterback, as Tulane backfield coach, and William Bevan, star guard of Minnesota's unbeaten 1934 team, as line coach. Last year Bevan was line coach at Iowa State Teacher's College.

Dauber End Coach.

Ray Dauber, present Tulane freshman coach, formerly of Mississippi State, will be the end coach, and Charles Rucker, former star tackle of Tulane, will be the new freshman coach.

The appointment of the new coaches means that both Cox and his first assistant, Lester Lautenschlaeger, will be dropped as Tulane football coaches. They have contracts for two more years, but it is likely they will seek other coaching connections. At present Cox is in negotiation with Oklahoma A. and M. If he gets that job, Lautenschlaeger may go with him.

Under the head coachship of Bernie Bierman, Cox and Lautenschlaeger aided in building the great football teams put out by Tulane. In 1931, Bierman's last year at Tulane, the wave played in the Rose Bowl with Dawson at quarterback. Cox and Lautenschlaeger successfully coached Tulane's 1934 squad that won the inaugural game in New Orleans Sugar Bowl against Temple.

Trounced by L. S. U.

Their future looked bright at Tulane until midway of last season's schedule. They lost some games that the athletic council thought should have been won and as the season closed with crushing defeat by the ancient rival, Louisiana State University, Cox was summarily removed by the council.

Dawson will return to Tulane but after consideration he turned down the offer and recommended Dawson, whom he considers as "one of the outstanding young coaches in the country." Other coaches were considered along with Dawson, but today the council announced that Dawson had signed a four-year contract at $7,500 a year.

Star Coast Runner Suffers a Leg Injury

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 30 (AP).—Bob Fowler, considered an outstanding American Olympic track prospect, may be lost to the University of California for most of the season because of a leg injury, Coach Brutus Hamilton said today.

The lanky, bespectacled long distance ace, rated among the leading ten of the country, pulled up lame in his first turnout, the result of a sprained Achilles tendon suffered last year.

Wolgast Suspended.

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 30 (AP).—Midget Wolgast was suspended indefinitely by the Portland Boxing Commission today on the contention that the former flyweight champion did not put forth his best efforts in a match here Tuesday with Ritchie Fontaine.

Whisky Prime Issue In Wisconsin U. Row

Trainer Swears Coach Ordered Him to Give Liquor to Gridmen.

By the United Press.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 30.—Whether University of Wisconsin football players have or have not been served a wee drop of whisky prior to a gruelling gridiron battle has grown into an important issue under the university regents' investigation, it was disclosed today.

An informant who is on the inside in the investigation of the muddled affairs of the athletic department, revealed that notarized statements were obtained from William J. Fallon, football team trainer, admitting he spiked the players' coffee with alcoholic stimulants before important games under direct orders from Coach Clarence W. Spears.

Fallon's affidavit was supported by another sworn to by William H. Aspinwall, athletic department accountant, asserting he was sent to purchase liquor on these occasions, according to the informant who said he examined both affidavits.

The regents also have affidavits from heads of the student infirmary charging spears with securing release of certain injured players before the infirmary believed they were sufficiently recovered, the informant said.

Both Fallon and Aspinwall were evasive when questioned about the matter, however, claimin. they were under orders not to talk to anyone regarding athletic department affairs excepting officials conducting the inquiry.

Fallon denied signing such an affidavit.

Olympics Take Lead in Ring Tourney

Fights Viewed by 1,500; Stetson Gets Verdict Over Chappelle.

By Bill McCormick.

MEMBERS of the Golden Glove face-lifting and massaging society went through the motions in the second round of the third annual local tournament before an assemblage of 1,500 at the Catholic University gymnasium last night.

It was another thoroughly enjoyable evening for lovers of larrup, that was climaxed by a heavyweight encounter between George Chappelle and Don Stetson, which in turn was climaxed by the first bad decision rendered in the tournament.

The Olympic Athletic Club, favored at the outset, but which dropped back in the race for the team championship on the opening night, jumped into the lead last night with five members advanced to the finals. The Jewish Community Center, whose first entry campaigned last night, was second for

Two Register 60s, Tie for Coast Lead

By the Associated Press

Avalon, Calif., Jan. 30.—Old Man Par was handed a first-class shellacking today in the first 18-hole round of the $5,000 Santa Catalina Island Open golf tournament, as Fred Morrison, of Pasadena, and Ted Longworth, of Portland, shot 60's, six under par, to tie for the lead.

Walter Hagen, with many a golf shot still left in him, fired a 61 to trail the pace setters.

The world's most famous shotmakers sprinkled the "crip" Catalina course with birdies and eagles, as 62's, 63's, 64's, 65's and 66's were scored with monotonous regularity. Torchi Toda, Japanese ace, shot a 62, as did Henry Picard, and a flock of unknowns.

Washington's Wiffy Cox, Sacramento Open ruler, scored a 64, his 29 being tied for low nine-hole honors. Leo Walper, also of Washington, had a 35-36—71, and Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, a 29-34—63. Lynn Lary, former Washington baseball player, turned in a 69.

Paul Waner Wins Golf Tourney Final, 7 and 6

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Paul Waner, who plays golf and baseball with almost equal facility, today won the Miami Biltmore left-handers' tournament, defeating J. C. Rogerson, of Miami Springs, Fla., 7 and 6, in the 36-hole final.

Waner, medalist in the southpaw competition, played the winning match as he did the others, stroking effortlessly for a sub-80 medal score.

Kearney's Odds on Flag Races 'Screwy,' Says Doyle, Rival

By Jack Diamond.
Copyright, 1936, by the United Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—There could be no question of the admiration of Mr. Jack Doyle, the Broadway betting baron, had for the assembly of liver and bacon in the dish before him, for it was produced in the rotisserie of his own billiard shop, but he didn't deal so gently with the winter baseball book unveiled in St. Louis this week by the veteran Tom Kearney.

"It's a Dutch book," muttered Mr. Doyle. "He's cutting the corners awfully close.

"Now, look at the odds he gives in the National League—Chicago, 3-2; St. Louis, 3-1; New York, 4-1; Pittsburgh, 6-1; Cincinnati, 20-1; Brooklyn, 40-1; Philadelphia, 100-1, and Boston, 100-1.

"Why, you take the four top ones, the real contenders, that is, and bet on 'em all. And you'd have a 99 per cent chance against the book.

"Take 3-2 on the Cubs, that's 40 per cent; 3-1 on the Cards, that's 25 per cent, making it 65; 4-1 on the Giants is another 20 per cent, bringing it to 85, and 6-1 on the Pirates makes it 14 more, or 99 per cent in all.

"Why, in a future book at this time of year, there should be at least a 20 per cent margin to allow for all the things that can happen by the middle of April, injuries, trades and the rest of it all. Like when a tailor makes a suit he always leaves an outlet—the price-maker should be the same way.

"I'm going to put out my own odds in another two weeks. I'm going down to Florida, for I'm just getting over a bad winter sickness. And I'm going to take in the Olympics this summer, too.

"But I think Kearney underrates the Giants and overrates the Yanks (also third choice at 4-1). I'll pick the Giants for third choice, too, but at a longer price.

"And in the National League I see a tough race with Chicago, St. Louis and New York, 5 to 2, and take your pick."

Dr. Doyle eschews the designation of betting commissioner—"to hell with the commissions; you just make prices, that's all"—and has been feeling the pulse of the sports world ever since the winter of '89. That's when he saw his first Harvard-Yale football battle as a 14-year-old bike messenger from the sidelines to a Springfield, Mass., newspaper office.

"There were only two or three substitutions to a side the whole afternoon," reflected the gray-haired, deep-voiced sports devotee. "The busiest guys on the field those days were the stretcher bearers.

"What odds are you quoting on the Louis-Schmeling fight, and Louis-Braddock?" we asked.

"Its pretty early yet," he replied, attacking his lettuce and tomato salad, but I think it'll open 2½ to 1 against Schemling and 1 to 2 against Louis. The public really makes the price, but that's about how I'd open it.

"And after he licks Schmeling, as he likely will, you'll get 4 and 5 to 1 against Braddock and I think the Irish boy has got about an even chance.

"He's an overrated fighter, this Louis is. The New York public is gullible with fighters. There are more suckers right down there at Forty-second and Broadway than there are in Twin Oaks and where-have-you."

U. S. Ski Squad Again Is Hit By Injury

Bietila Hurts His Head in Practice, but Will Be Ready for Games.

By the Associated Press.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Jan. 30.—Already conceded small chance against their rivals from the north countries, America's Olympic skiers found themselves beset by an injury jinx today.

To a casualty list that already included Edgar H. Hunter, jr., of Dartmouth, and Holf Monsen, of Lake Placid, N. Y., was added Walter I. Bietila, of Ishpeming, Mich.

Bietila, a sophomore at the University of Michigan and youngest man on the ski squad, suffered head injuries during a practice jump. He will be laid up for a day or two, but should have fully recovered by the time the winter games start, February 6.

Hunter and Monsen, however, definitely are out of the Olympics. Hunter suffered severe flesh wounds of the leg in a fall at practice yesterday. The injury was responding rapidly to treatment today, but team officials said he would not be able to compete.

Monsen also has been crossed off the competitive list because of a scraped vein he suffered in one of his workouts here. The injury is not serious, in itself, but it makes it impossible for Monsen to wear ski-boots without excessive pain.

Monsen is a veteran of two American Olympic teams. He finished sixth in the ski jump of the 1928 games and eleventh in the combined event in 1932.

Hockeyites Weary, Locked in Room

Boston, Jan. 30 (AP).—Cambridge Latin School's hockey team lost a tie game by default yesterday after Coach Jack Culhane locked his players in a dressing room.

Culhane said he acted to protect the boys, weary after four overtime periods. The score was tied at 3-all.

The players howled like caged tigers. Officials of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Hockey League and the coach of the opposing Newton High School pleaded. Culhane remained adamant.

"They've played 56 minutes of hard hockey," he said. "That's enough. They're tired and would be easily injured."

Braves' Name Is Changed To 'Bees'

Accepted Officially After 1,327 Are Submitted by 13,000 Fans.

Writers' Mad Scramble for Play on Words Is Next Step.

By the United Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—If the Boston National League Baseball Club doesn't have a honey of a team hereafter, don't blame their new name.

For the Boston Braves of old were rechristened the "Boston Bees" late today by a jury of sports writers of whom entomologists were in the majority.

"Bees" it was after writers with a bent for ornithology, history, art and zoology had put up a fierce but futile fight to make the new monicker blue birds, beacons, colonials, bulls or bulldogs.

1,327 Names Submitted.

The new name, one of 1,327 submitted by 13,000 fans throughout the United States and its territories, was accepted officially by President Bob Quinn after it had been voted by 14 of the 26 writers.

So henceforth, it will be the "Boston Bees." Their playing field will be the "Bee Hive" and the club's new official colors will be blue and gold.

Thirteen persons suggested "Boston Bees." Their names were put in a hat and that of Arthur Rockwood, of East Weymouth, was drawn as the winner of two season passes. Eleven others will receive two tickets each to the opening game. The thirteenth, Norman Drawer, of Chicago, will get a pair of passes to the opening game of one of the Chicago teams, Quinn said.

There was a half-hearted effort to have the club retain its old name—Braves—by which the Boston Nationals were known since 1912, when the then president, Jim Gaffney, applied it because of interests close to New York's Tammany Hall.

But that was out, for when Quinn came here from the Brooklyn Dodgers several months ago to head the newly organized club he decided to start from scratch and ruled that "Braves," along with "Tribe," "Wigwam," "Tepee," "Warriors" and similar epithets must go into the scrap heap.

He decided upon a contest which brought forth such samples of the imagination as Aspirins, Comics, Hamburgers, Lemons, Pill Boxes, Zulus and Zippers. One Boston fan contributed 73 choices and even then failed to place a winner.

Play on Words.

Although Quinn had announced at the opening of the nechristening meeting that he'd like a name indicative of Massachusetts or Boston, "Bees" became the choice because it lends itself readily to both headlines and cartoons, and alliteration—not to mention the play on words.

For example (please pardon it), there'll be a mad scramble among baseball writers to beat each other to the pun(ch) with such atrocities as:

"The Bees swarmed to their spring training camp today prior to buzzing around the league in a beeline for the pennant under the guidance of Keeper of the Bees Bill McKechnie . . . There'll be no place for drones in the Beehive because all the Boston players are busy little bees looking for world series honey . . . Busy Bee Berger Belts Ball as Bees Sting Giants . . . Cubs Swat Bees . . ."

Which is as good a spot as any to make a "Bee-line" to the nearest exit.

Patty Berg Triumphs, To Meet Miss Orcutt

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Superb golf that foreshadowed a meeting with Maureen Orcutt crews tomorrow advanced 17-year-old Patty Berg today to the finals of the Championship of Champions women's tournament.

Excelling even her brilliant play in the national title event last year, Miss Berg handed Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., one of the worst defeats of her successful career, 5 and 4.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

FACE-LIFTING operations on the Washington ball club during the past two seasons have all but dispersed that successful crew of 1933 which won Washington's last pennant. Less than two years after Washington was riding high with a championship team, that Nats are a sixth-place ball club, boasting only four members of that aggregation that was the class of the league in 1933. With speed almost unbelievable in baseball, barring wholesale swaps, the champions of three years ago have been dismantled.

POVICH.

Of that collection who were tops in 1933, only Earl Whitehill, Joe Kuhel, Buddy Myer and Jack Russell remain among the regulars. The others have passed on to other clubs, some out of the league, as the result of a steady shift in talent.

Whitehill's co-workers on that clever pitching staff of 1933—Monte Weaver, Walter Stewart, Al Crowder and Bob Burke—all have passed on. Crowder was deemed useless to the Nats as early as midseason 1934 and went to the Tigers for the waiver price; Weaver bogged down in 1934 and passed to the minors early last season; Stewart was traded to the Indians last year for Belve Bean and both principals in the trade are now out of the big leagues; Burke is the property of the eighth-place Albany club of the International League.

Weaver, who was one of the bright heroes of the World Series debacle against the Giants in the 1933 series with his losing 2-to-1 game, is attempting a comeback, but Whitehill is the only member of the 1933 staff who remains as a regular with the Nats. Jack Russell, a relief pitching star in 1933, has been of little value to the club for two years.

THE entire outfield, whose valiant slugging helped to lift the Nats to the top of the league in '33 has now departed the fold with the announcement yesterday of Fred Schulte's sale to the Pirates via waivers. Goose Goslin, a landmark in right field, was the first of the outer trio to pass on, going to the Tigers at the end of the 1934 season in exchange for Johnny Stone. Heinie Manush stuck with the club until last month, but Sam Rice was released immediately following the 1934 campaign.

Buddy Myer and Joe Kuhel alone remain of the infield. Ossie Bluege found the weight of increasing years and young competition too great for him at third base and as early as 1934 was supplanted by Cecil Travis, although he is still about as a utility performer. Cronin's departure to Boston in the famous quarter-million dollar deal at the end of the 1934 season thus left shortstop to be populated by new faces.

Luke Sewell, the regular catcher of 1933, lasted only one season after the winning of the pennant by the Nats. On the presumption that Cliff Bolton would adequately fill the team's catching needs—false as it proved—Sewell was dispatched to St. Louis in the deal for Irving Hadley and transferred by the Browns to the White Sox almost in the same motion.

Even the coaching ranks felt the seeming ax that hung over the 1933 crew. When Cronin went to the Red Sox in 1935 he took along with him Al Schacht, leaving Altrock and Kerr to carry on as the Nats' coaching staff. There are some undoubtedly unkind enough to say that Schacht's loss was small, indeed, but Cronin wasted little time in procuring him as a lieutenant.

Older heads on the team who professed no great respect or admiration for Cronin even when he was leading them to a pennant in '33 blame him directly for the disintegration of the Nats the following season.

"Why, it was the first time in baseball history that a manager deliberately broke up a pennant-winning team," declared one of the Nats' veterans. "Cronin made the biggest mistake of his career with Washington when he traded off Goose Goslin to the Tigers for Johnny Stone. Everybody knows that Goose was the only powerhouse on the club.

"And he let General Crowder get away to the Tigers during the 1934 season without reason, too. Crowder wasn't winning, of course, but everybody, including Cronin, should have known he wasn't through. He was worried to the point of illness about his wife's sickness and never was really ready to pitch. Look what he did at Detroit when he was rid of his cares.

"You can't take fellows like Goslin and Crowder away from a pennant winner without wrecking it. That's the two best reasons why we finished seventh after winning the pennant the year before. No team ever dropped that low in the course of one year."

Eastern May Find Western Stern Rival in Series Clash Today

Champs Face Revengeful Quintet

Coach Moore Expected to Use Full Strength Throughout.

INTERHIGH STANDINGS.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Eastern	1	0	1.000
Western	1	1	.500
Roosevelt	1	1	.500
Central	1	1	.500
Tech	1	1	.500

By John R. Vosburgh.

CHAMPION and runner-up respectively for two years in a row, Eastern and Western will throw their interhigh pace-setting talent at one another this afternoon at the Central High gymnasium.

The Roosevelt High gym, where the game was originally scheduled, will be in use this afternoon. The game between Central and Tech has been postponed until February 14, due to the table tennis tournament at the Tech gymnasium.

With the No. 1 and No. 2 teams of the series in the lead roles, today's performance is likely to develop into the most spectacular chapter in this 1936 interhigh series. If Tech and Central, buried far down in the standings, could press Eastern to a close result, why shouldn't Western—such is the Georgetowners' reasoning.

Eastern Won First.

It was Western which gave Eastern a stirring struggle in their first series meeting earlier in the month, with the champs finally coming through to win, 36 to 24. The 12-point lead was established in the second half after the Georgetowners had taken a 13-12 lead late in the first half.

Western's victory over Roosevelt Tuesday disclosed the Georgetowners zooming along at full tilt while Eastern was having a tough time pulling out a 35-30 game from Central. If the two teams are displaying the same form today, it should be a merry tussle of near-even proportions.

Use Full Strength.

Coach Cliff Moore, who has been using several second-stringers to start, is expected to throw his first-stringers in from the beginning today with Gene Daly and Capt. Gerry Burns at forward, Paul Borden, center and Hop Lomax and Charlie Wells at the guards.

For Eastern, Capt. Chick Hollidge and Bill Buckholtz will take care of the forward posts with Buddy Shane at center and Dope Dean and Red Scheible at the guard posts.

The champs will be seeking their twenty-first straight interhigh victory. They will enter the game a heavy favorite to win but, paradoxically, the least favored to win that the series has seen.

Landon Prep Five Upsets Bethesda

Landon Prep sprang a big basketball upset yesterday by trouneing Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, 19 to 11, on the Bethesda court. The Prepsters set too fast a pace in the final quarter for the home team, and won going away. Several of Bethesda's players were unable to play due to illness or absence from the city.

Senator Speaks

Maryland Ends Drills Today For Duels

THE University of Maryland basketball and boxing teams today will apply the finishing touches for tomorrow's double-barreled attraction at College Park, which supplies sports fans of the vicinity with their second big feature of the week.

Duke meets the Terps in basketball and Virginia's champion ring team will climb through the ropes to throw a few punches at the Old Line larrupers. The show begins at 8 o'clock, with a capacity house of 5,000 fans expected.

Maryland probably will enter the lists in the unfamiliar role of underdog, inasmuch as Coach Burt Shipley's courtmen do not quite figure as strongly as the Blue Devils on paper—and the boxers have yet to win.

But neither Duke nor Virginia will be expecting easy assignments. Duke always has experienced trouble with the Terp dribblers, and Virginia still remembers the trouble it had getting a draw last winter.

No changes have been announced for either of Maryland's teams, with the usual exception in boxing. Charley Gebhardt will return to the 115-pound division, an assignment he shares with a teammate, Birmingham, Schwartz, Webb, Nedomatsky, Lombardo, Gormley and Birkland, will don the padded gloves.

The court team will line up with Willis at center; Thomas and Allen, forwards; Buscher and Waters, guards.

Gallaudet Faces American U. Team

The Gallaudet courtmen will play American University at the latter's gym tonight. The Eagles have been the traditional rivals of the Blues for many years, and the contest is likely to be close and hard fought.

Coach Krug, of Gallaudet, is centering his hopes on Ellerhorst, leading scorer of the Kendall Green five. Ellerhorst so far this season has scored 61 points in eight games. Hoffmeister, another high-scoring forward, also is expected to make a good showing. "Racy" Drake and Merle Goodin will be at guards and Joe Burnett, 6-footer, will perform at center.

The Blues have broken even this season, winning four games and losing four.

League Meeting.

The meeting of the Community Center League Managers scheduled for tonight has been postponed until tomorrow night at 7:30 at Eastern High School, President Pete English, of the league, stated.

John Marshall Winner Over Central

Takes 10th Victory in Row as Washingtonians' Rally Is Short.

AN ADVERSE decision, handed down by John Marshall, ended a hard-fought case argued before the press bench of the Central court yesterday—a basketball case in which John Marshall High of Richmond, coached by a lawyer, was given a 25-to-24 verdict over Central High.

The undefeated South Atlantic champions had Eastern's interhigh titleholders among its onlookers and the local champs went away only moderately impressed by the visitors' prowess. John Marshall eliminated Eastern from the Washington and Lee University tournament last year but in this observer's opinion would have a tough time keeping pace with the Northeast net-swishers this season.

It was a tough game for Coach Jack Ray's Central satellites to lose. They held John Marshall scoreless in the last quarter in a near-successful effort to close a 25-to-20 gap.

Long Shot Is Futile.

But for an apparently rubber rim on one of the baskets, Central would have taken a 26-to-25 decision, a long shot by Billy Vermillion in the final minute of play defying all laws of gravity by juggling back and forth and around the rim like a rubber ball on a rubber cord, finally bouncing out to seal the game.

The victory was John Marshall's tenth straight of the season. The jumping Justices had beaten Central by 11 points earlier in the season in Richmond, but were fortunate to win by 1 yesterday. Central was playing some of its best ball of the season, matching the pace set by the visitors point for point.

Coached by Attorney Dave Miller, former University of Richmond star athlete, the Justices came across with their big argument in the third quarter, when they all but clinched the case by taking a 25-to-18 lead after being tied at 11 to 11 at halftime. Don Fones, light-haired Central sharpshooter, gave the Virginians an eyeful of basket manufacturing from each and every angle. Fones accounted for exactly half of Central's points, popping five baskets from the floor with either hand or both; it didn't seem to matter.

Central Takes Lead.

Central took an 8-to-7 lead in the first quarter, but John Marshall had evened it at 11-all. Fones made 8 points in a row after the first quarter to keep Central in the running, but Capt. Bill McCann, of John Marshall, led an offensive which had his team leading 25 to 20 going into the last quarter. Billy Vermillion missed a foul starting off the final period, but Fones and Gerstenfeld each sank a neat basket apiece from the side to make it 25 to 24 with four minutes to go.

The Justices displayed a formidable defensive and Central was unable to sink the necessary extra basket, although Vermillion's shot did everything but sink.

Crouch and Flynn Vie For Cue Title Tonight

Everett Crouch and Gene Flynn won the right to compete for the city three-cornered billiards championship tonight by virtue of their victories last night in the round-robin tournament in progress at the Lewis & Krause billiard parlors.

Crouch defeated Johnny Dodge, 35-21, with a high run of 3, in 54 innings. Ruark triumphed over Gene Flynn by the narrow but sufficient margin of 35-32, boasting a run of 5 in a 77-inning match.

In a preliminary match tonight Dodge will oppose Warren Hokie at 7:30 o'clock. Championship play will start immediately after.

Allen Quit Singing to Become Star Hurdler—By Accident

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Except for an accident, Samuel Donahue (Muscle Head) Allen, of Bristow, Okla., might be sending his ten voice over the ether waves a la Lanny Ross instead of being America's premier high hurdler.

It all happened five years ago when he was a junior at Bristow High. Sam would have no part of athletics. He was proud of his membership in the school quartet and glee club. In the spring of 1931 the students were getting ready for the annual inter-class track and field meet.

"Sam, we haven't anybody for the high hurdles," said the captain of the junior team. "You're nominated to represent us."

Sam accepted and won. That was the beginning and today, a junior at Oklahoma Baptist University, Sam is studying physical education and hopes some day to be a track coach.

It isn't the first time a tenor has gone track man. Nine years ago Lanny Ross, of radio fame, was on the Yale University track team. Ross held the national 300-yard title in 1927, but turned down a trip to England with the combined Yale-Harvard team to make a tour of the country with the Glee Club.

In 1932 Allen "made" the football, basketball and track teams; won the State 120-yard high hurdling championship in record-breaking time of 15 seconds flat. After doing 14.9 in a heat in the national scholastic championships at Chicat that year he fell in the final.

He commanded national attention last year when he defeated a strong field, including the celebrated Percy Beard, in the Princeton invitation meet, winning the high hurdles in 14.3 seconds. He won the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship in 14.5.

With the retirement of Beard, the world record holder at 14.2, Allen now stands out as the country's ace high hurdler and a good prospect for Olympic victory. He's here for the Millrose Athletic Association games in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

"I'm going to plug for a berth on the Olympic team," said the 22-year-old Southwesterner, who stands 5 feet 11 and weighs 145 pounds.

"It'll mean a lot to me. I'm engaged to Mary Louise Wade, of Oklahoma City, and if I make the team we're going to be married and make the trip to Germany our honeymoon."

Allen's national hero is Carl Hubbell, pitching ace of the New York Giants. Carl hails from Meeker, Okla., and operates a basketball team in Shawnee, where Oklahoma Baptist is located.

"I refereed a practice game his team payed the other night," said Sam. "He picks up the ball with one hand and throws it just like a baseball. The guy catching it is almost knocked flat."

How came the monicker "Muscle Head," he was asked.

"It was an accident," he drawled. "I walked into my room one night and my roommate barked, 'Listen here, Muscle Head!' It stuck to me."

Table Tennis Play Launched; Two Washingtonians Survive

Post Staff Photo.

JIMMY McCLURE,

18-year-old Indianapolis youth, who last night successfully opened the defense of his American Zone Table Tennis championship in the tournament at Tech High School.

WASHINGTON got its first glimpse of big-time table tennis last night in the Tech Gym where the third annual American championships swung into action before some 300 spectators.

In the only upset, Bob Radcliffe, of Washington, rallied from almost certain defeat to overcome the brilliance of seventh-seeded Jimmy Jacobson, of New York. The scores were 11—21, 18—21, 24—22, 21—19, 21—19.

Elias Schuman, District champion, proved to be the only other local entry to stay in the running. The youthful Wilson Teachers College student defeated Douglas Cortland, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 21—12, 21—15 and then went on to irmi Ricardo Nunez, of New York, 21—13, 23—15 and then went on to trim Ricardo Nunez, of New York, 21—13, 23—21, 21—10.

Star Field Vies In Tank Meet Tomorrow

THE strongest field ever entered in a Washington swimming meet begins arriving in the Capital today to join the city's own representatives to compete in the District A. A. U.'s midwinter championships tomorrow night at the Shoreham pool.

Featuring the appearance of Peter Fick, of the New York A. C., national 100-yard champion, the big carnival has attracted many of the foremost men and women speedsters in the East. Two national championships will be decided, the men's Junior National medley relay title and the women's individual Junior National medley crown.

To layman sports followers, two more colorful races could hardly have been selected than these two championship contests. Each offers back-stroke, breast-stroke and free-style swimming. The men's race calls for a versatile team. The women's for a versatile young lady.

A late entry was received yesterday which promises to make the men's race one of the big events of the Eastern swimming season—the powerful Dragon Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, composed of Paul Friessel, one of the world's great breast-strokers; John Wicklun, ace free-styler, and Albert Anderson, one of the fastest back-strokers of the New York area.

The field in the men's National title race now consists of two teams from the Naval Academy, one representing the Columbia University Freshmen, another the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia; the York Aquatic Club, of York, Pa.; Massanutten Military Academy, Washington Y. M. C. A., Baltimore Y. M. C. A. and the Dragon Club, which now is the logical favorite to take the title.

The women's championship has only three entrants at this writing, which, however, will deduct little from the spectacular quality of the race inasmuch as Marie Glazier, ace mermaid of the Penn A. C.; Margaret Russell, of Baltimore, and Lydia Cori, of the Shoreham, are the entries. The girls swim 100 yards apiece, alternating back-stroke, breast-stroke and free-style.

Maryland Five Beats W. & M., 41 to 39

Visitors' Late Rally Comes Within One Basket of Tying Score.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A LILLIPUTIAN team of 11'l William and Mary players succumbed to a band of Maryland Gullivers last night at College Park, but not without a great battle that saw them come within one basket of tying the count in the last minute of play. The score was 41-39.

Apparently a far superior team to the fighting little Virginians, who looked as if they had been drafted from the Singer Midgets for the evening, Maryland rolled up a 14-4 lead in ho-hum fashion soon after the opening tap-off. But that ho-hum attitude disappeared with a nightmarish start as the visitors rallied and first tied the score at 16-all and then assumed an 18-16 lead, with the first half almost spent.

Led by Flickinger.

Little Joe Flickinger, a muscular gent who could spot Mercury a 10-yard lead and outrun him in a 100-yard dash, led William and Mary's rally that overcame Maryland's first advantage. His work netted 13 points and enabled him to tie Vic Willis, Maryland center, for scoring honors.

Aided and abetted by Art Blaker, Flickinger also had a heavy hand in the second half spurt that brought his team within whispering distance of its host, but they didn't quite make it.

Maryland was visibly far off color. The Terps muffed innumerable easy shots and their set plays were just about as baffling as a front page banner line. The Orange broke up most of these plays and Maryland had to resort to the keen eyes of Bernie Buscher, Charley Keller and others for its points. Willis slapped in most of his baskets following errant shots of his mates.

For Maryland the game was in the nature of a warm-up for tomorrow night's important debate with Duke, but the boys almost found it a trifle too warm for them.

Western Mermen Face Baltimore Poly Today

Western High's swimming team will meet two formidable opponents this week-end, meeting Baltimore Polytechnic this afternoon at the Central Y. M. C. A. pool and traveling to Mercersburg, Pa., tomorrow to take on the powerful Mercersburg Academy natators. The Baltimore team's invasion today will find Western gunning for its third victory of the season. It will be the first meet between the two schools in two years.

Sphas to Arrive Tomorrow Night

The Philadelphia Hebrews, nicknamed the Sphas, 1933-34 American League champions and leading contenders for the world basketball title, will arrive in town tomorrow night to engage the Heurich Pro quint Sunday afternoon in the Heurich gymnasium.

The present edition of the team is now in its seventh year, during which time it has won three Eastern League championships. The team in 1934 won every scheduled game of the second half, 14 in number.

The Sphas will line up Sunday with Shikey Gotthoffer and Cy Kaselman at forward, George Wolfe and Red Rosan, guards, and Moe Goldman, center.

The Brewers will use Yowell and Russell, forwards; Ingham, center, and Bennie and Zahn, guards.

Hitchens' Fives 'All Set' for Tourney

Agriculture Teams' Coach Wishes Feb. 18 Were Already Here.

JIMMY HITCHENS, coach of the Department of Agriculture, who has been "hitch-en" stars to his basketball wagons during the last year, can't wait until February 18—the date the District A. A. U. basketball tournament will begin at Heurich gym under the sponsorship of The Washington Post.

One of the busiest coaches of amateur clubs around Washington, Jumpin' Jimmy made it known yesterday that three of his Agriculture teams, maybe more, would compete in the gigantic basketball pageant.

Said Hitchens:

"We'll have a strong entry in the girls' class—and we're going to win that—and we'll have two in the unlimited boys' division, one of my senior teams having a good chance of winning.

"I wish February 18 were tomorrow. We're rarin' to go."

Play Tomorrow.

Hitchens' three teams will snap into action tomorrow night at George Washington's gym. At 7:30 his Agriculture Flashes meet the Soils Conservation; at 8:30 the seniors will engage Jewish Community Center, and the crack feminine players will meet the Burhardt girls of Atlantic City, N. J., at 9:30 in the feature game.

Coach Hitchens said that his Agriculture seniors were composed of former college stars. One of 'em is Arnold Praheim, late of Yankton (S. Dak.) College, an aspirant for Olympic pentathlon honors, who is said to be "some shucks" as a basket feeder and tosser. Other stars are Dick Lund, of Denver, all Rocky Mountain selection; Ken Berry, of North Central College; Dick Fox, of North Dakota, and Jack Jarnigan, of Maryville, Tenn.

Aggie Girls' Roster.

Playing with the Aggie girls are Madge Graney, Mardge Watson, Hylna Mays, Betty Albaugh, Charlotte Reidell, Catherine Shea, Charlotte Wade, Jane Joubert, Lucille Patterson, Becky Blackman and Frances Winter, manager. Among their victims are Jewish Community Center and National Christian Church.

The girls are after the A. A. U. title won last year by Leland.

Winfree Johnson, A. A. U. basketball chairman, stated last night that entry blanks would be available at the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest. By Monday they may be procured at Spaulding's, Treman-King and other sporting goods stores. Entries close February 14.

Mountainy Man Wins on Hialeah Turf

10,000 Watch Experiment At Hialeah

Workman Set Down for Rough Riding in Second Race.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 30.—The turf course, circling the banks of the fantastic old lake at this racing plant, was the scene of the feature race today for the first time in the history of the sport hereabouts. Instigated as something of an experiment and a touch of old England, races on the turf have become popular here during the last two meetings, but have been confined to the cheaper platers.

A field of six better-than-average distance horses accepted the issue today in the mile and a sixteenth test, named the Eastern Air Lines Handicap. A keen struggle resulted.

Woodlander Third.

Mountainy Man, owned by the Mulvihill family, proved that he must have a heart as big as a good-sized foothill by withstanding gruelling punishment dealt by Jockey Mack Garner to cling to a head margin over Chasar. The latter was three lengths in front of Woodlander.

It was truly June in January here here today and more than 10,000 customers were out in hope of enjoying the sport.

The first disqualifictaion of the meeting resulted in the running of the second race for juveniles, and brought a six-day suspension to Jockey Sonny Workman, the Washington rider. He had the mount on Bravo Caruso, a well-played colt, and after his mount bumped Don Guillermo through the stretch the stewards ruled him out of the money.

Don Guillermo took up the winning position at a $61 mutuel with Anglo Saxon getting the place award and Game Boy the show. The pay-off winner is owned by C. W. Muller, vice president of Panama and was ridden by A. De Lara, a Panama boy who does not speak English.

De Lara did not make a claim of foul and there was some surprise when the numbers were changed. Workman was charged with rough riding, although the consensus of opinion in the press box was that the cold and not the rider was to blame. Bravo Caruso and Don Guillermo were in a duel virtually from the start.

Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 30.

Dear Al:

There is a noticeable absence of $2 bills at this track. In fact, I have not seen one since coming to Florida. Upon inquiry I learned that the "deuce" is not handled by the Florida banks but I cannot find a logical reason. Mutuel Manager Mahoney tells me that a few come in from the North in the rolls of the vacationists but they are not paid out by the track cashiers. Jockey Jimmie Lynch, painfully injured in a spill here early in the meeting, visited the track for the first time since the accident. He will be out of action for another three weeks, however. Fourteen claims have been made at the meeting with a top price of $2,750 paid for Pegotty Ann, which J. C. Spreckles 3d took from Hal Price Headley. George Marshall, the Washington laundryman and sportsman, supervises the betting of Postmaster General James A. Farley in front of the press box each afternoon. Hubert Leblanc, who rode Jane D in the third race today, was accepting the first mount of his career. He has been working horses for Max Hirsch for two years and horsemen believe he will make good. BILL.

First race—Ten Law after several brisk trials was tightened in a sprint behind superior company here yesterday. Don Meade probably will ride and I see no reason for mistakes. Flag of War and Foreign Legion to take care of the others.

Second race—Peggy Porter ran greenly but well to be second last out and she is likely to show the improvement necessary to defeat these. Sophia Tucker seems to be a good one. Clouds for the show and a possible surprise.

Third race—Miss Subway missed by a narrow margin in her most recent start. She is fit and gets in with only 99 pounds. Jubilargo has worked excellently and Clocker Mike says this one will beat the filly. We shall see what we shall see. Billie Wise for the show.

Fourth race—Don Creole's last was an impressive one. He is a fairly dependable fellow and I'm stringing along despite top weight of 115 pounds. Gallant Gay and Exaggeration for the place and show.

Fifth race—Fidelis, beaten a lip here the other day, shapes up as best in this company. Cheshire has been racing into form and is dangerous. Play Vote for the minor award.

Sixth race—Flag Cadet will like the route and the company. He is reported to be as sharp as the proverbial tack and should gain the brackets. Someone Else and Miss Dignity for the other money places. Mike likes the last named at the weights.

Seventh race—Chatterfel, long-shot winner yesterday, should come right back with another victory. If the top one makes mistakes I look for Night Ray to take it all. This one has feather weight and has had a recent tightener. Capabalanca for the remainder.

BEST BET—Ten Law.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FINISHER, $5.70, $4.40, $3.40; BELLE GRIER, $3.80, $2.90; SIC 'EM, $6.70.

FINISHER, away nicely and kept abreast of the early leaders, came determinedly to gain command entering the homestretch, was kept under strong urging and withstood BELLE GRIER. Latter, rated close to the pacemakers, obtained racing room on the inside when making her run, but could not gain on the winner during the closing furlongs. SIC 'EM was rushed hard to get to the front, had good speed for the first five furlongs then weakened slowly.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-olds. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:50. Start good (chute). Won driving; places, same. Winner, C. W. Muller's b. c. (2), by Dia Dono—Flutter. Trained by B. Moncriefe. Value to winner, $600; second, $128; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 4-5.

*Field. †Disqualified. ‡Masmore Farm and Miss E. Dunnegan entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON GUILLERMO, $61.00, $30.00, $17.40; ANGLO SAXON, $25.60, $16.90; GAME BOY, $54.30.

BRAVO CARUSO, strongly handled and holding a forward position, withstood a tenacious drive willingly all during the running and held on steadily to win. He was disqualified for causing interference midway of the stretch. DON GUILLERMO, next disqualified for causing interference midway of the stretch, while in the thick of contention, with right interference midway of the homestretch, while in the thick of contention, and held on stubbornly until the close. ANGLO SAXON, a strong factor all during the running, continued with excellent courage under a vigorous drive. He also suffered interference.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:24½. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Winner, William N. Adrians' ch. g. (7), by Tournament II—Alwinston Betty. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LORD TOURNAMENT, $8.00, $3.60, $2.80; LOLSCHEN, $3.70, $3.00; KING'S PLEASURE, $3.30.

LORD TOURNAMENT, handling his weight well after moving into command soon after the break on KING'S PLEASURE in the first five furlongs, then had enough in reserve to withstand LOLSCHEN under mild urging. LOLSCHEN, permitted to settle in her best stride before engaging the leaders, secured racing room on the inside after reaching the homestretch and closed resolutely under punishment. KING'S PLEASURE forced a steady pace for five furlongs, then tired steadily.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowance. The Naples. For 3-year-olds. Went to post as 3:54. Off at 3:55½. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Winner, W. C. Stroube's b. f. †Wheatley Stable and Belair Stud entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAY BUBBLE, $5.10, $3.70, $2.50; REAPING, $8.20, $3.80; FAUST, $2.60.

BAY BUBBLE was sent to the front with a rush, was steadied until reaching the homestretch, drew into a safe lead and came out without effort approaching the finish. REAPING followed in the first flight, rallied when placed to maintain pace but could not trouble the winner. FAUST improved his position on the outside and outstayed TORITA.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. Eastern Air Lines Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:24. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's b. c. (3), by Solimn—Baby Evelyn. Trained by George Gould. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48 3-5.

†Mrs. R. Denemark entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOUNTAINY MAN, $8.20, $4.10, $3.40; CHASAR (entry), $3.20, $2.50; WOODLANDER, $3.60.

MOUNTAINY MAN, rated close to the leaders after getting into position at the first turn, challenged strongly when leaving the backstretch, assumed the lead at the final turning into the stretch and held on stubbornly to stall off CHASAR. Latter, sluggish in the early racing, went to the outside when making his run, reached the leaders midway of the homestretch and came willingly under a hard drive at the close. WOODLANDER, outrun in the first six furlongs, went through between horses to reach contention. Then finished gamely under punishment.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:48. Off at 4:48½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, H. P. Carr's ch. ch. m. (5), by Prince of Bourbon—Loved One. Trained by Seymour. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST ROMANCE, $10.70, $6.30, $4.00; HIGHEST POINT, $4.30; PLAYFUL MARTHA, $4.10.

LAST ROMANCE improved position on the inside in the last five-sixteenths, stole through on the inside of the leaders inside the closing furlong and, under a rousing finish, was up right at the end. HIGHEST POINT, strongly reserved back of the pace, was in the PLAYFUL MARTHA drive down inside the final furlong, but Schraudenbach was of little help when it came to a drive. PLAYFUL MARTHA went through on the inside of BULLFINCH to take command leaving the backstretch, permitted the winner to come through on the inside midway of the homestretch, then faltered badly in the last sixteenth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:19. Off at 5:23½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's ch. g. (6), by Suzy American—Queen of Allah. Trained by George Gould. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51 3-5.

†Formerly ran as La Cherie.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMERICAN PRINCE, $38.80, $15.00, $9.30; ROCKY PRINCE, $13.20, $8.70; JOHNS BIRTHDAY, $3.60.

AMERICAN PRINCE sent into a forward position when straightened into the backstretch, responded gamely when shaken up, came around the leaders and, closing fast, was up in the last sixteenth. ROCKY PRINCE, prominent during the early running, loomed up menacingly entering the homestretch and continued with good courage under a hard drive. JOHNS BIRTHDAY, timidly ridden going to the first turns, and permitted to fall far out of contention, obtained racing room on the inside until reaching the final turn, swung very wide thereafter, but finished with a bold rush. He may have been closer with better handling.

Bank Reserves Up $61,000,000 In Past Week

Excess now 3.09 Billions; Gold Stock Total Rises Seven Millions.

The weekly condition statement of Reserve banks yesterday showed that the excess reserves of member banks resumed a sharp upward tendency during the week ended January 29, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,488,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $22,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On January 29 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,470,000,000, a decrease of $7,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $11,000,000 in money in circulation and $62,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and an increase of $7,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increase of $61,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $6,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $6,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency. Member bank reserve balances on January 29 were estimated to be approximately $3,090,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

John M. Franklin I. M. M. President

Directors of the International Mercantile Marine Co. yesterday elected P. A. S. Franklin, chairman of the board and John M. Franklin president.

P. A. S. Franklin became president of the International Mercantile Marine Co. in 1916. During the World War, by the joint appointment of the Secretary of War and the shipping board, he was in charge of all American shipping, including the carriage of supplies by the Army transport service, and he received the Distinguished Service Medal in recognition of his services.

John M. Franklin, the new president of the marine company, has also been elected president of the United States Lines Co. He was born in Baltimore County, Md., and is 40 years old. He was educated at Middlesex and Harvard University. During the World War Mr. Franklin was a captain overseas in the American Army, serving in the tank corps. He received the Military Cross for gallantry in action.

The net income of the Capital Transit Company, exclusive of the Glen Echo Park system, for last year, according to the statement filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, was $383,417.39, which compares with $976,106.27 in 1934, a decrease of $592,688.88 or 60.7 per cent.

Gross revenue last year of $1,038,155.52 compared with $1,655,286.89 in 1934 decreased $617,131.37, or 37.2 per cent. Deductions from gross income last year totaled $654,738.13 and in 1934 $679,180.62, a decrease of $24,442.49, or 3.6 per cent.

Total operating expenses, exclusive of taxes and depreciation, were $8,472,773.34 last year which compares with $6,970,425.62 for 1934, an increase of $1,502,347.62 or 21.6 per cent.

For December last year the company showed a loss of $2,437.99, which compared with the $89,210.91 net income in December, 1934.

Gross revenue for the month was $50,644.34, which compares with $145,349.73 in 1934, a decrease of $94,705.39, or 65.2 per cent. Operating expenses of $700,083.61 compared with $636,163.34 for the previous year increased $153,890.27 or 24.2 per cent.

Deductions from gross income of $53,082.33 compares with $56,138.82 in 1934, a decrease of $3,056.49 or 5.4 per cent.

Stocks Turn Lower in Active Trading After Firm Opening; Dollar Drops.

New York, Jan. 30.—On a turnover of around 3,000,000 shares the stock market weakened a little in the afternoon, after moving forward in the first hour or so, and at the close the majority of prices were fractionally under the previous closing levels. Government bonds were steady, but dollars were depressed. May wheat closed unchanged at 89½ cents a bushel.

Stock group movements were mixed. Oils did fairly well. Standard looked a little tired from its unusual advance of yesterday and ruled a fraction lower. Consolidated was the most active of the group and rose nearly a point to a new high price. California and Indiana made new high prices. Airplanes were firm, with profit taking now and then. Douglas mounted to its best price at two flights up. Sperry weakened a little. United Air Lines came forward. Most of the motor stocks were easier.

Railroad shares looked strong in the early bidding. Features were Central, Nickel Plate and Delaware & Hudson. Central rose to a new high price with the largest turnover. The Alleghany preferreds jumped 2 to 4 points. Union Pacific was buoyant for a while, but became heavy in the late trading. Chemicals were mixed.

Most of the utilities were steady. Steels were firm. U. S. Steel climbed a point at its best. Foods were mixed. Coppers were higher, but the silvers were unsettled. U. S. Smelting dropped 2 points. Continued heaviness in wheat prices dragged down Case and Deere, but others of the farm group held firm. Luiquor stocks had a poor day. Schenley gave up 2 points. Walker fell back a point.

Inflation Uncertainty.

Visiting delegates to Wall street from the environs of Washington (claiming advisory positions with the Administration) were conspicuously absent today, after having worn out their welcome last week, and the financial world was left to use its own judgment on the point of whether payment of the bonus would bring an issue of queer money (denied by the Secretary of the Treasury), a heavy blanket of new taxes (suggested by the President), or perhaps merely the borrowing of another two and a half billion through the usual bank channels.

The opposition of Congressmen up for re-election to new taxes this year is understandable, as is also their callousness toward a solvent Treasury. Moreover, the mere wish for sound procedure, namely to cover expenditures with revenues, is not the same thing as finding the money. How that much additional taxes could be raised is a question which only a crystal gazer can answer. It is apparent that most Congressmen think the job already has been completed, or will be as soon as the baby bonds are printed, for their idea of finance is that to give a promise is to discharge a cash obligation.

Meanwhile enough Representatives will come forward with inflationary proposals to keep the markets interested; success in the legislative stream for some of them will be possible, and uncertainty over the dollar's future, budget balancing, taxation and all the other handicaps to business will be added to that of the coming election. Business may, as industrial leaders confidently assert, have enough momentum toward recovery to go forward in spite of everything; but how much the pace will be slackened is another matter.

May Lose Gold.

If stock and bonds were indifferent to inflationary talk in Congress, the foreign exchange market took a different view. It showed greater sensitiveness to the radical proposals, and less confidence in the opposite. Dollars generally declined, although Government bonds held steady. Francs were particularly strong, helped by an improvement in the home situation, and it now looks as though the Treasury's reputed willingness to ship out gold will be tested. If gold be allowed to depart the dollar may be helped temporarily; but the effect on capital of a sustained outward flow of gold might well be to set in motion a flight of funds.

Should that occur the securities markets undoubtedly would suffer, for the efflux would mean the sale of securities, by foreigners as well as by home guards. That the markets have not seen some of them in the past year of constantly rising public debt and scandalous waste of public funds, without sincere effort to put finances in order, doubtless is due to the general feeling that, bad as conditions are, the prospect for currency stability and for business recovery is better in the United States than it is in most other countries.

Purely from a financial standpoint the loss of a great deal of gold would do us more good than harm. The metal is needed elsewhere more than it is here, and some redistribution must be made before international stabilization of currencies can take place. Moreover, the mounting supply here means greater potential credit inflation and acts as a spur to the spendthrifts in Washington. This week's statement of the Bank of France shows the loss of a billion francs in gold, but that was caused by the recent change in the ministry.

Gold Exports.

France may be the first country to get some good from the United Sates for the first time in more than a year. The franc pushed nearer its gold point in relation to dollars, aided not alone by the inflationist efforts in the Congress, but also by an improved outlook for the Sarraut government, following the declaration by the new administration to the Chamber. The gold export point on francs in this market is 6.6943 cents, and the price early this afternoon was 6.68 cents. The gold point for guilders now is 68.745 cents. For Swiss francs it is 33.06 cents, and for belgas, 17.12 cents. The Federal Reserve Bank has plenty of gold export application blanks ready.

Preferreds.

An unsatisfactory performance in some of the common stock sectors was disregarded by a number of preferred stocks. Preferred issues to rise fom 2½ to 7¼ points included Freeport, Fuller, International Silver, Radio B, Westinghouse and Cuban American.

Sales.

Selling of three stocks the features of the reverse side of the market yesterday, continued today. American Radiator lost more than a point in heavy dealings, bringing its decline since the close of last week to more than 4 points. Continental and American Can were unrelieved from selling pressure. Their losses averaged 4 points each.

All Leading Cities But New York Report Increases for Week.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $16,336,692.03 for the week ended January 29, which is an increase of 26.56 per cent over the total reported for the same period last year. Compared with the $21,474,047.52 reported for the week ended January 22, clearings decreased about 24 per cent.

New York, Jan. 30.—While still above the totals for the comparative week last year, bank clearings did not show so large a percentage increase as a week ago. The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, January 29, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,272,618,000, against $5,119,085,000 last year, an increase of 3 per cent.

At New York City clearings amounted to $3,517,506,000, or 2.7 per cent under the total reported for the corresponding week in 1935. The aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,755,112,000 was 16.6 per cent above last year's total.

Figures at leading centers, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of a year ago, are printed herewith.

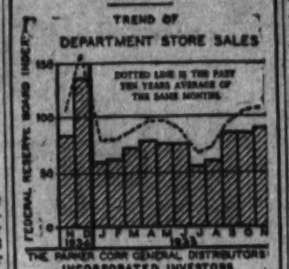
Higher Priced Goods Make Best Gains



Boston, Mass., Jan. 23.—While chain store sales throughout the country last November gained 7½ per cent over the previous year, they did not make sales gains equal to department stores, or mail order sales which increased 18 per cent. A conclusion is that people are buying higher priced merchandise.

Brokers' Loans Drop $31,000,000 in Week

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $924,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday, a decrease of $31,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $883,000,000.

Bethlehem Earnings Best In Five Years

Last Year's Net Was More Than 7 Times Total for 1934.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said today that he looked for a better demand for steel from heavy industries. The corporation reported the largest fourth-quarter net earnings since 1929 and net income for 1935 was the best since 1930.

"The railroads have been buying more," Grace said, "and I expect they will continue to increase their buying."

Shipbuilding and the naval program played a part in the improvement in the company's business, he said, adding that merchant shipbuilding has been developing particularly in tankers.

Questioned on the outlook for the company, he replied, "If we can maintain our present rate, that is all I can expect. On the average this would represent a gain of about 10 per over last year."

Common Nets 24 Cents.

Net earnings for the December quarter of $2,396,026, equaled 24 cents a share on the common stock. This compared with $701,616, or 75 cents a share on the preferred in the previous quarter and net income of $411,009, or 44 cents a share on the senior shares in the final quarter of 1935.

For the full year 1935 net earnings of $4,291,253 jumped to more than seven times net of $550,571 in 1934. In 1933 the corporation had a deficit of $8,735,723.

The year's income equaled $4.59 a preferred share, compared with 59 cents in 1934.

The estimated value of orders on hand December 31, 1935, totaled $74,015,251, a rise of 30 per cent over a year ago. New business booked in 1935 was 33 per cent above 1933 at $210,033,300.

In the December quarter operations rose to 43.9 per cent of capacity from 37.8 per cent in the previous quarter and 28.2 per cent in the fourth quarter of 1934. Current production stands around 44 per cent. A year ago the corporation was operating at 40 per cent of capacity.

National Steel

The National Steel Corporation, in a preliminary statement today for the year ended December 31, 1935, showed a net profit of $11,136,415, after taxes and other charges, compared with a net $6,050,722 in 1934. Earnings per share of par $33 capital stock last year were $5.15, compared with $2.80 a share in the previous year.

Renaldo Pardoned In Passport Fraud

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department said yesterday that Duncan Renaldo, movie actor, convicted of making false statements on his passport when he left this country with the company that made "Trader Horn" in Africa, had been pardoned by President Roosevelt.

Renaldo came to America as a worker on a steamship, it was said, went ashore on a temporary seaman's permit, obtained a job in Hollywood, and failed to leave the country at the expiration of the permit.

When the "Trader Horn" company left for Africa, officials asserted, Renaldo swore he was an American citizen, born in Camden, N. J.

The Labor Department has thus far been unsuccessful in efforts to obtain a visa to deport Renaldo to Rumania.

Coal Gas Victim Revived.

Slain Recluse 'Like a Father,' Hummer Avers

Fairfax Farmer Denies Slaying; 'I Thought World of Him.'

In clear, unshaken tones, Hugh Hummer, 50-year-old tenant farmer, told a jury trying him in Fairfax County Courthouse for the murder of an aged Falls Church, Va., recluse, that Henry Edwards, his erstwhile colored farm hand, lied when he said he helped out in the killing by pounding the old man's head with a rock.

More than 200 persons jammed the courtroom when Hummer, accused with Edwards in the murder of Truman Brush, 76-year-old hermit, took the stand in his own defense.

In quick, emphatic answers to questions of defense counsel, he developed a complete denial of the story told in the witness box the day before by Edwards, a story that had linked him in a conspiracy to slay the recluse and rob him of money believed to have been hidden in the house.

"Like a Father to Him."

"I thought the world of the old man," Hummer said. "He was almost like a father to me."

Hummer recalled how Brush had given him his first job when he was a boy and how he and the man he is charged with killing had been on such close terms that Mrs. Jeanette Williams, Brush's niece, had engaged him to look after her uncle after the death of her father, John Brush.

Dr. C. A. Ransom, Fairfax County coroner, had given the courtroom a moment of excitement by insisting that blood spots he observed on Hummer's shoes shortly after the finding of Brush's body could not have come there as Hummer walked through blood-spattered undergrowth near where the body lay.

Ransom declared that the blood had dropped on Hummer's shoes; that if he had bloodied his shoes in any other way, the spots would have appeared smeared.

To Jury Today.

Ransom testified that Brush had been dead scarcely more than an hour when he reached the body, fixing the time of the killing between 3 and 4 p. m. on August 23.

Carl McIntosh, county policeman, said Hummer, who reported the finding of the body to authorities, appeared so nervous that he was unable to roll a cigarette.

Hummer admitted being away from home at the time fixed for the murder, but explained that he had gone into a section of woods near his home to see how plentiful the squirrels were in anticipation of the opening of the hunting season.

Defense and prosecution counsel completed examination of witnesses yesterday and the case will go to the jury today after final pleas are made by both sides.

Flier Mollison Fined $10 for Intoxication

Los Angeles, Jan. 30 (AP).—James A. Mollison, noted British flier, was fined $10 in Beverly Hills Justice Court today on a charge of intoxication.

When Mollison reached for the $10, he found his evening clothes did not contain the required sum.

"I'll tell you what, your lordship," Mollison drawled, "I'll teach you to fly for the 2 pounds."

Judge Cecil Holland declined.

Knives Seized From Convicts In Loeb Prison

Illinois Rocked by Charges in Wake of Killing; Governor Acts.

By the Associated Press.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 30.—Repercussions of the sensational prison razor slaying of "thrill slayer" Richard Loeb swept through the State today as a sudden "shakedown" of the Stateville Penitentiary resulted in the seizure of several knives.

The guards who combed a part of the big prison were unsuccessful in their efforts to find several missing razors of the same type used by James Day, moody young felon, in hacking the scion of a wealthy Chicago family to death in a bathroom battle last Tuesday, but Warden Joseph Ragen declared the search would be pushed until all weapons were found.

State Representative Harry McCaskrin, Rock Island Republican, telegraphed a demand for a "full inquiry and honest report" of conditions in penal institutions to Democratic Gov. Henry Horner and announced he would seek authorization of a legislative investigation next week.

The Governor received further details of Day's story that Loeb's unnatural overtures drove him to his deed, but declined to comment until he had read a full account. He commended Ragen at almost the same time as the warden declared he would co-operate fully in any investigation.

"It will be welcome," Ragen asserted. "We have nothing here to hide."

Attorney General Otto Kerner stated the case was in the hands of State's Attorney W. R. McCabe, of Will County, but added:

"If everything is not done that should be done, I will step in."

McCabe, stating he wanted to ascertain whether "Loeb could buy privileges with his money," postponed his scheduled interrogation of Nathan Leopold, confederate of Loeb in the Bobby Franks murder, because the convict has refused to talk. He said he would question Day tomorrow in an attempt to build his murder case against him.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

QUESTIONS have been piling up on the Diary desk, so we'll clear a few today. Here goes:

Q. Who is the sergeant at arms of the Senate?—M. Grace Flint (P).

BAKER.

A. Chesley W. Jurney, of Texas. Jurney has been continuously connected with Congress for 36 years. He was elected sergeant at arms of the Senate on March 9, 1933.

Q. Can you tell me how bequests to the Library of Congress are handled?—Jennifer Van Heusen (F).

A. Such bequests are administered by the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, which was created by an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1925, and as amended January 27 1926, with the power "to accept, receive, hold and administer such gifts or bequests of personal property for the benefit of, or in connection with, the library, its collections, or its service as may be approved by the board and by the Joint Committee on the Library."

The present personnel of the board consists of Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury; Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress; Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, 1624 Crescent place.

Duties of Comptroller.

Q. What are the specific duties of the Comptroller General of the United States?—Sanderson V. May (C).

A. The Comptroller General is charged by law with the settlement and adjustment, independently of the executive departments, of all claims and demands whatever by the Government of the United States or against it, and all accounts whatever in which the United States Government is concerned, either as debtor or creditor, and is vested with all powers and duties previously conferred or imposed by law upon the former Comptroller of the Treasury and the six auditors of the Treasury Department; also with the duty of keeping the personal ledger accounts of disbursing and collecting officers; of reporting to Congress delinquency in rendering accounts; and of certifying balances, which are final and conclusive, upon the executive branch of the Government. He is in charge of the General Accounting Office. It is also his duty to investigate all matters relating to the receipt, disbursement and application of public funds and to make recommendations to the President, when requested by him, and to Congress concerning legislation necessary to facilitate the prompt and accurate rendition and settlement of accounts and concerning other matters.

Q. Who is the director of the Botanic Garden?—Constance L. Holmes (F).

A. At the present time the directorship of the United States Botanic Garden, west of the Capitol grounds, is vacant. David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, is acting director. The assistant director is Wilmer J. Paget and Emily Haydon is chief clerk.

RICHARD HIMBER, whose orchestra is known to listeners from coast to coast, was playing an engagement the other evening when some one requested him to play "Dinah." "I'd like to play that number but we never play 'hot' tunes," Himber replied.

The man who made the request hesitated a moment and then countered with "I'm sorry, but what I wanted was 'Dinah for One,' please, James."

Which brings to mind the gag used in the "Fibber McGee and Molly" program last week. The girl in the show who talks so fast had this to say: "Sure I know the world is round. My uncle says it's round just like a grapefruit—and just as full of mean little squirts!"

Speaking of Dick Himber brings to mind his program tonight at WJSV, at 10, at which time Rudy Vallee makes one of his infrequent guest appearances. Most of Vallee's appearances on other than his own programs are occasioned by some respect he wishes to pay to an artist who got his start through Vallee's efforts, many times in Vallee's organization. Himber is no exception. Vallee proposed he appear on Himber's one-hundredth consecutive program—and Himber accepted the offer with alacrity.

Culbertson on Bridge

Misfit Hands.

Yesterday I made the statement that I considered it a sound philosophy not to "hang" one trick short of a game contract. But I was specific in saying that this applied only to fitting hands, with the partners voluntarily advancing to within a trick of game.

I could have generalized by merely advocating aggressiveness on hands that fit—or, to use a favorite phrase, "safe hands" (meaning those where no large penalty is possible). I have found this to be winning bridge.

But I can not be too emphatic in warning against the "black sheep" of the contract family—misfits! To suggest conservatism in their handling is far too mild. One might as well advise conservatism in the handling of nitroglycerin! Extreme, frightened-to-death caution is more to the point.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 Spade	Pass	2 Clubs	Pass
2 Hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

South properly could have bid three hearts instead of two—a forcing rebid. Yet North was extremely shrewd in his abrupt withdrawal from the bidding. Naturally, he greatly would have preferred playing the hand at three clubs, but he didn't at all like the trend of the bidding. Game seemed out of the question, since he had neither of his partner's suits, and there was a grave danger that three clubs would serve only to encourage South toward at least one more bid. The two heart bid wasn't doubled—but if the bidding should go into more rarefied atmosphere, the opponents might suddenly come to life with a big stick.

As a matter of fact, North bid three clubs, South hardly could be expected to pass with his splendid hand. And, just as certainly, West would have pounced on a three heart bid. As it was, on West's opening lead of a club and East's trump return, South could not avoid the loss of six or seven tricks. But the 100 point penalty was small compared to what it would have been with continued bidding.
